

STRATEGIES

FOR EFFECTIVE

ORAL

PRESENTATION

1.Do your homework.

Nobody can give a good presentation without putting in some serious time preparing remarks.

Many gifted speakers look as if they're just talking off the cuff, saying whatever comes to mind.

But, in truth, they've spent considerable time figuring out what they're going to say. You should, too.

2. Play the parts.

- Good presentations are structured in sections. Many presentations need only two or three main points. Organizing your points into a few main parts and telling your audience what these parts are—both before and as you go through your presentation—can be the difference between a winning presentation and a loser.

3.Do a dry run.

- It's always good to do a run-through (or even a couple of run-throughs) the night before the presentation. This can help with both your timing and your manner of presentation. Be sure to make mental notes if you went on too long or got nervous or stuck. Some people find it useful to have a friend pretend to be the audience: He or she can build up your confidence and maybe even ask a question or two.

4. Look presentable

- No need to wear a suit, but it's hard for people to take a presentation seriously when you look like someone who just rolled out of bed.

5. Talk; don't read

- Nobody enjoys seeing a speaker burying his or her face in a script, reading stiffly from a piece of paper. Try to talk from notes, or, if you use a written-out text, try to look down at it only occasionally.

6. Take it slow.

- The single biggest mistake inexperienced speakers make is going too fast. Remember that your audience is hearing the material for the first time and isn't nearly as familiar with the topic as you are.

Extra Pointer.

- If you find yourself running out of time, either drop or briefly summarize any leftover material. If your presentation includes a discussion period, gesture at the points you haven't fully covered and suggest them as things that could be discussed later.

7. Use aids

- For certain sorts of presentations, visual aids—such as PowerPoints, handouts, even things written on the board—can help your audience locate and grasp the main points. Just be sure to explain these materials fully in your presentation:

8. Don't bury the crowd

- Including massive numbers of quotations or unsounded amounts of data can overwhelm even the most attentive audience.

9. Play it straight.

- There's no harm in including a little humor in your presentations, especially if you can carry it off well. But in most presentations, clowns will get C's.

10.Circle the crowd.

- A very important part of public speaking is to make eye contact with people seated in all parts of the room—even those nodding off in the back. That shows people that you're interested in communicating with them—not just getting through this experience as quickly as possible.

11. Appear relaxed

- You have to be relaxed—few speakers are—but at least try to appear as relaxed as possible. Bring along some water or a drink, take short breaks from time to time, and think pleasant thoughts. No one enjoys speakers who are trembling and sweating bullets.

12. Finish strong

- Always be sure to have a satisfying conclusion to your presentation in which you make clear to the listeners what they now know. It creates a warm feeling in the minds of your listeners and shows them that they've really learned something from your talk—which they probably have.

13. Welcome interruptions.

- Some speakers are terrified that someone will interrupt them with a question or comment. Actually, this is one of the best things that can happen, because it shows that someone in the audience has engaged with what you're saying, and, if you have the time to offer a brief response, it can actually lead to genuine progress on the point you were making.

(SD3) This exotic island also offers world class surfing and diving, and exhilarating treks in the wild. Everywhere intricately carved temples provides inspirational spirituality.

✓ Lastly, end the paragraph with the concluding sentence.

~for example:

- These are the reasons why Bali island in Indonesia had been popular for decades.

EXAMPLES OF DESCRIPTIV E ESSAY

(TS)Gregory is my beautiful gray Persian cat. (SD1)He walks with pride and grace, performing a dance of disdain as he slowly lifts and lowers each paw with the delicacy of a ballet dancer. (SD2)His pride, however, does not extend to his appearance, for he spends most of his time indoors watching television and growing fat. He enjoys TV commercials, especially those for Meow Mix and 9 Lives. His familiarity with cat food commercials has led him to reject generic brands of cat food in favor of only the most expensive brands. (SD3)Gregory is as finicky about visitors as he is about what he eats, befriending some and repelling others. He may snuggle up against your ankle, begging to be petted, or he may imitate a skunk and stain your favorite trousers. Gregory does not do this to establish his territory, as many cat experts think, but to humiliate me because he is jealous of my friends. After my guests have fled, I look at the old fleabag snoozing and smiling to himself in front of the television set, and I have to forgive him for his obnoxious, but endearing, habits. (CS)That is my Gregory, my beloved gray Persian cat.

(TS) I wake up in the morning and smell what I absolutely love, pancakes. (SD1) The aroma of them cooking on the stove reaches my nose and wakes me up instantaneously. I make my way into the kitchen and can hear my mother flipping them into the air and singing her favorite song. (SD2) Immediately I see the golden mound of pancakes on the counter. (SD3) My mother tells me to dig in, so I grab two soft, and fluffy circular disks and slap them on my plate. I pour on the thick sweet syrup, grab my fork and knife and plop a piece in my mouth. (CS) The taste is absolutely phenomenal, the combination of butter, syrup, and rich pancake overtake my mouth and I am in complete bliss. I really loves pancakes!

(TS) My favorite place is Kona Village, Hawaii. (SD1) The smell of coconut is sitting in the room, the tan bedding makes me want to sink into the pillows and the room is sitting on an ancient lava bed. (SD2) Outside, the gravel crunches on my feet, and I hear the waves crashing onto the beach. I hear laughter and voices coming from the pool and dining area. The bar is mixing some kind of exotic drink. As I walk down to the beach, I smell the wonderful food being lifted up onto the buffet tables. The beach is wide, and has many small tide pools towards the end of the beach. The sandy bottom of the ocean softens my feet as I jump right back up on the boogie board. As I get out, my feet have sand between the toes, and my hair is wet and salty. The air is salty and full of fragrant scents like sunscreen and drinks, and food waving through the air. (SD3) As I grab a plate at the start of the buffet line, I smell food being cooked, and people chatting. I smell the different scents of food as I pass by them. I smell the hamburgers being cooked, and the ketchup and fresh French fries under the beating light. As I sit down at the wood chairs at your table, I eye the checkered table cloth and napkin and start eating. The heat is perfect. It is a mix between warm and a cool breeze. (CS) Seriously, these are the reasons why Kona Village, Hawaii became my most favorite place.

DIFFERENT STYLES OF PRESENTTION

AMIR KHYSRO
MA ENGLISH, ISLAMYAT

Manuscript

- The manuscript method is a form of speech delivery that involves speaking from text. With this method, a speaker will write out her speech word for word and practice how she will deliver the speech. A disadvantage of this method is a person may sound too practiced or stiff. To avoid sounding rehearsed, use eye contact, facial expressions and vocal variety to engage the audience. Use frequent glances at highlighted key points instead of reading the speech word for word

Memorization

- The memorization method is a form of speech delivery that involves fully memorizing a speech, from start to finish, before delivering it. This method of delivery allows a speaker to move around the stage or platform and maintain eye contact with the audience without relying on a script or notes. For speakers who deliver their speeches by memorization, add inflection to the voice and keep notes nearby to avoid forgetting an important key point.

Impromptu

- The impromptu speech is spur-of-the-moment, with little to no time to prepare for this type of speech. For this method, you may be asked to give a few remarks, or share your thoughts with the group. The important thing to remember with this type of speaking is to know your main point, limit your thoughts to two to three ideas, and wrap it up with a conclusion. If you can think well enough on your feet, your conclusion will connect to your opening remarks or main idea. Impromptu speeches are best kept brief.

Extemporaneous

- The extemporaneous method is ideal for most speaking situations. While it requires a great deal of preparation, it allows for great flexibility for the speaker, often delivering a much more engaging speech. For this method, a speaker will organize a speech with notes or an outline, and practice the delivery, but not word-for-word. A speaker may highlight key points in the speech and memorize a few portions of the speech, but will also speak in a more conversational tone. The extemporaneous method of delivery gives a speaker the flexibility to deliver a speech in a natural manner while maintaining eye contact and engaging an audience.

ESSAY Writing

By Amirkhysro(IPMS)

Word origin

- ▶ The origin is French essai means an attempt.
- ▶ Bacon as a pioneer in essay writing in English.

Definition by Britinnica

- Essay, an analytic, interpretative, or critical literary composition usually much shorter and less systematic and formal than a dissertation or thesis and usually dealing with its subject from a limited and often personal point of view.
- Ben johnson says:
ESSAY -- A loose sally of the mind an irregular indigested piece not a regular and orderly composition.

Components of a good essay

An essay is a piece of writing that is written to convince someone of something or to simply inform the reader about a particular topic. In order for the reader to be convinced or adequately informed, the essay must include several important components to make it flow in a logical way. The main parts (or sections) to an essay are the intro, body, and conclusion. In a standard short essay, five paragraphs can provide the reader with enough information in a short amount of space. For a research paper or dissertation, however, it is essential that more than five paragraphs are present in order not to overwhelm the reader with too much information in one paragraph.

Introduction

- Must contain an attention grabber for the reader or at least make the essay sound interesting, may begin with a quote about the particular topic
- Ensure that the intro moves from the general to the specific in regards to the topic
- Provides the reader with a “road map” of the essay in a logical order
- At the end there should be what is called a thesis statement, arguably the most important component of the intro
- The thesis statement states the aim of the paper and may give insight into the author’s examples and evidence

Body

- Includes the evidence and support of the paper in addition to the author's ideas
- Paragraphs must include a topic sentence which relates the discussion back to the thesis statement
- Logical ordering of ideas: 3 types of order
 - Chronological order---order of time, good for narratives
 - Spatial order-good for descriptions of locations; top to bottom, e.g.
 - Emphatic order-least important to most important; most common for college writing
- Ensure that transition sentences are present to create a good flow to the essay
- Include substantial examples and evidence to support your argument and remember to cite, cite, cite!
- Make sure each example is relevant to your particular topic

Conclusion

- This section should wrap all of your arguments and points
- Should restate the main arguments in a simplified manner
- Ensure that the reader is left with something to think about, particularly if it is an argumentative essay
- Always remember to allow time to rewrite the first draft of your essay and, then, to proofread it before turning it in. For help, visit the Writing Center!

Types of Paragraphs

Types of Paragraphs

📌 For our purposes, here are the basic types of paragraphs:

- ✦ Narrative
- ✦ Exposition
- ✦ Descriptive
- ✦ Persuasive

Narrative

- 🕒 Tells a story
- 🕒 Uses specific details
- 🕒 Is not a mere listing of events- it has characters, setting, conflict, and resolution
 - ✦ Time and place are usually established
- 🕒 Usually chronologically organized

Narrative Example

So now on nights when my mother presented her tests, I performed listlessly, my head propped on one arm. I pretended to be bored, and I was. I got so bored I started counting the bellows of the foghorns out on the bay while my mother drilled me in other areas... The next day, I played a game with myself, seeing if my mother would give up on me before eight bellows. After a while, I usually counted only one, maybe two at the most. At last, she was beginning to give up hope.

Exposition

- 🔔 Informative/explanatory
- 🔔 Can be included incidentally with narrative or descriptive, but can also stand alone.
- 🔔 The challenge of writing an exposition paragraph is your credibility – how do I know that you know what you're talking about?
Answer: Citations! (from experts)

Exposition Example

- 🏠 Stress is defined as a state of extreme difficulty that causes mental or physical tension. In a recent study, teenagers were shown to experience stress as often as adults. According to the study, the most common causes of stressors to teens include divorce of parents, death of a loved one, loneliness, moving to a new neighborhood, and having difficulty in a social environment. These stressors can greatly change the way teens act in many circumstances.

Description

- 🕒 Series of detailed observations
- 🕒 Usually not used by itself, but rather as a part of a whole
- 🕒 The challenge is to make it interesting
 - ✦ Imagery
 - ✦ Sensory details; five senses
 - ✦ Similes, metaphors

Description Example

🕒 When I think of the home town of my youth, all that I seem to remember is dust- the brown, crumbly dust of late summer- arid, sterile dust that gets into the eyes and makes them water, gets into the throat and between the toes of bare brown feet. I don't know why I should remember only the dust... And so, when I think of that time and that place, I remember only the dry September of the dirt roads and grassless yards of the shanty-town where I lived.

Persuasive

- 🔔 Uses direct approach
 - ✦ “Believe me and do it!”
- 🔔 Calls reader to action or to take a stand on an important issue
- 🔔 More than just opinion is needed; information, analysis, and context must be given to the reader to let him/her make a decision

Persuasive Example

- 👤 Students are currently getting ripped off. Students who spend an average of 10 hours or more on extracurricular activities should receive some kind of academic credit. Most students who are involved in sports, music, journalism, or theater activities are actively learning on a daily basis. They attend practice and events and participate regularly as they would in class. Furthermore, their participation helps them become more responsible and disciplined students. Students are putting forth the effort, and not getting any recognition for their time.

The background features abstract geometric shapes. A large light green triangle points towards the top right. A red triangle points towards the bottom left, overlapping the green one. An olive green triangle points towards the bottom left, overlapping both the red and light green triangles.

PARAGRAPH

A paragraph can be defined as a group of sentences related to the same topic, even though it could be formed just by a single sentence.

TYPES OF PARAGRAPHS

According to the writing propose, paragraphs may be classify into four main categories:

Descriptive

To describe something or someone

Narrative

To tell stories or sequence of events

Expository

To explain something, give information or instructions

Persuasive

To convince the reader

DESCRIPTIVE PARAGRAPHS

Descriptive paragraphs aim to:

- ❖ Show the reader what a thing or person is like without physical contact.
 - ❖ Allow the reader to experience the phenomenon, item or event described in detail.

Their feature are:

- ❖ Words usually appeal to the five senses of touch, smell, sight, sound, and taste.
 - ❖ They normally include modifiers (e.g., adjectives, adverbs, prepositional phrases)
 - ❖ Figurative language are very common as well (e.g., metaphors, personification, similes)

EXAMPLE

“I climb up on the loading platform in back of the small country hardware store somewhere off Route 13 near Nassawadox on the Eastern Shore of Virginia. I am looking for the proprietor. The air is cool in the shadows of the storeroom and redolent (aromatic) of fresh-sawn lumber. I hear voices behind me. The proprietor, middle-aged with skin leathered by the sun, is taking to two young white men in bib overalls. The young white men are leaning on a rusting 1962 Ford station wagon of indeterminate color. From the shadows of the storeroom, I move in their direction.”

Defending the spirit by Randall Robinson

NARRATIVE PARAGRAPHS

Narrative paragraphs aim to tell about a sequence of actions.

Their feature are:

- ❖ There is always a clear beginning, middle and end.
 - ❖ They usually follow a plot line

EXAMPLE

“John Payton, an old friend and brilliant Washington lawyer, told me recently that UCLA Law School’s large entering class for fall 1997 would likely include not a single black , owing to general retreat from affirmative action. This is the new and disturbing national trend. In 1996 President Clinton signed a mean-spirited welfare reform bill that promised to push millions of children, black, brown, and white, into poverty. Month later, the President, with much pomp and fanfare, called from a platform in Philadelphia for mass volunteerism as an answer to our nation’s growing social ills. Sharing the platform with the president, were former presidents Carter and Bush. General Colin Powel provided something of a black imprimatur for the idea of substituting volunteerism for federal assistance to the poor.”

Defending the spirit by Randall Robinson

EXPOSITORY PARAGRAPH

Expository paragraphs aim to:

- ❖ Help the reader understand following a process or a method.
 - ❖ Provide information either explaining it or giving instructions.

Their feature are:

- ❖ They often require research.
 - ❖ An exposition usually includes techniques such as examples or illustrations to support a statement.
 - ❖ Also, ordinal sequence are often used (e.g. chronological or numerical)

EXAMPLE

“A sentence is a group of words that make sense when used together. A sentence expresses a complete thought. If a sentence does not express a complete thought, it is an incomplete sentence. A sentence begins with a capital letter and ends with a period(.), an exclamation point(!), or a question mark(?). Every sentence has a subject and a verb. Sentences are the basic units of all writing. Below you will see examples of incomplete sentences and complete sentences.”

Clear writing: step by step by Diana Bonet

PERSUASIVE PARAGRAPHS

Persuasive paragraphs aim to get the reader reaction, accepting or understanding the writer's position or proposal.

Their feature are:

- ❖ They often require the gathering of facts and research.
 - ❖ Usually, rhetorical devices are employed in order to influence the reader's opinion.

EXAMPLE

“We believe that we can change the things around us in accordance with our desires—we believe it because otherwise we can see no favorable outcome. We do not think of the outcome which generally comes to pass and is also favorable: we do not succeed in changing things in accordance with our desires, but gradually our desires change. The situation that we hoped to change because it was intolerable becomes unimportant to us. We have failed to surmount the obstacle, as we were absolutely determined to do, but life has taken us round it, led us beyond it, and then if we turn round to gaze into the distance of the past, we can barely see it, so imperceptible has it become.”

Remember while Writing Letter

A business letter is not a place for chit-chat. A business letter should be clear and concise. By taking time to plan your letter, you will save time in the writing and proofreading stages. During the planning stage, ask yourself a few simple questions. Jot down your answers to create an outline before you start writing.

Reason of writing letter?

The main reason for the letter should be understood from the subject line and first few sentences. You may cover more than one thing in one business letter, but there will almost always be a general reason for the letter.

Identify your main goal and what you hope to accomplish.

Writing a Business Letter

The term "business letter" makes people nervous. Many people worry that their writing is not advanced enough for business writing. This is not the case. An effective letter in business uses short, simple sentences and straightforward vocabulary. The easier a letter is to read, the better it is.

Parts of Letter

Following, may be the parts of Letters but not all letters have same requirements.

- 📧 Letterhead/Return Address
- 📧 Date Line
- 📧 Reference Line or Block
- 📧 Special Notations
- 📧 Inside Address
- 📧 Salutation
- 📧 Subject Line
- 📧 Text or Body
- 📧 Complimentary Closing
- 📧 Signature Block
- 📧 Reference Initials
- 📧 Enclosure Notation
- 📧 Courtesy Copy/ Carbon Copy
- 📧 Postscripts

Parts of Letter

Letterhead/Return Address—

Business letterheads provide the name, address, and phone number of the organization sending the letter. The letterhead may also include the company logo and fax number(s).

The date line-

The date line is placed two or three lines below the letterhead (or as many as six lines, if the letter is short). If no letterhead is used, the date line is directly beneath the return address.

Parts of Letter

🕒 Reference Line or Block—

Reference lines or blocks are one or two lines below the date line. Reference lines are usually aligned with the date. They can begin with RE or Reference. Sometimes a lead-in is needed to clarify the reference.

🕒 Special Notations—Special notations appear two lines below the date or reference line. Capital letters are used to make the note more visible.

Parts of Letter

 Inside Address—The inside address appears below the date or reference line. (It's the name and address of the person the letter is sent to, just like the one you put on the outside of the envelope.)

 Salutation— The salutation appears two spaces below the inside address and usually begins with Dear followed by the title and name of the addressee. In standard style punctuation, a colon (formal letters) or comma (informal letters) follows the salutation.

Parts of Letter

 Subject Line—Subject lines define the subject of the letter. They appear two lines below the salutation and two lines above the first line of the text. Subject lines are emphasized by using boldface type, underlining, or all capitals.

 Text or Body- Text is usually single-spaced with one blank line between paragraphs. (Most of Business letters written in three Paragraphs but some times it extends to many pages)

Parts of Letter

 Complimentary Closing—The complimentary closing appears two lines below the last line of text and is right of center. (eg: Sincerely, Regards etc....)

Parts of Letter

 Reference Initials—Reference initials (the writer's initials and the secretary's/typists' initials) are two lines below the last line of the signature block and flush with the left margin.

 Enclosure Notation— Enclosure notations remind readers that one or more enclosures are included. These notations appear directly under the reference initials.

Parts of Letter

- 👉 COURTESY COPY NOTATION (CC)— COURTESY COPY NOTATIONS, WHICH SHOW THE DISTRIBUTION OF THE LETTER, ARE TWO LINES BELOW THE ENCLOSURE NOTATIONS AND FLUSH LEFT.(ITS ALSO KNOWN AS CARBON COPY)
- 👉 POSTSCRIPTS- POSTSCRIPTS MAY BE USED AS ADDITIONS TO A LETTER AFTER IT HAS BEEN TYPED OR TO EMPHASIZE ITEMS, IT COMES BELOW CC: (EG: PS OR PSS: REPLY US

as soon as possible)

Parts of Letter

All letters must have following Parts:

1. Salutation
2. Body
 - First Paragraph
 - Second & Third Paragraph
3. Closing

Parts of Letter : Salutation

First and foremost, make sure that you spell the recipient's name correctly. You should also confirm the gender and proper title. Use Ms. for women and Mr. for men.

Here are some common ways to address the recipient:

- 🕒 Dear Mr Ayaan,
- 🕒 Dear Ms Sara,
- 🕒 Dear Sir or Madam
- 🕒 Gentlemen

Parts of Letter : First paragraph

In most types of business letter it is common to use a friendly greeting in the first sentence of the letter.

Here are some examples:

- 🕒 Thank you for your kind letter of January 5th.
- 🕒 I came across an ad for your company in The Dawn.
- 🕒 It was a pleasure meeting you at the conference this month.
- 🕒 I'm writing to enquire about...
- 🕒 I'm interested in the job opening posted on your company website.

Parts of Letter : Second and Third paragraphs

Use a few short paragraphs to go into greater detail about your main point. If one paragraph is all you need, don't write an extra paragraph just to make your letter look longer. If you are including sensitive material, such as rejecting an offer or informing an employee of a layoff period, embed this sentence in the second paragraph rather than opening with it.

Parts of Letter : Final paragraph

- Your last paragraph should include requests, reminders, and notes on enclosures. If necessary, your contact information should also be in this paragraph.

Examples:

- 🔔 Please respond at your earliest convenience.
- 🔔 I look forward to...
- 🔔 If you require more information...
- 🔔 Thank you for taking this into consideration.
- 🔔 I appreciate any feedback you may have.
- 🔔 Enclosed you will find...
- 🔔 Feel free to contact me by phone or email.

Closing

Here are some common ways to close a letter.

🕒 Yours truly,

🕒 Yours sincerely,

🕒 Sincerely,

🕒 Sincerely yours

🕒 Thank you,

🕒 Best wishes

🕒 Best of luck

🕒 Warm regards { Letter Writing }

SUBJECT: Facilities Update

I'm writing to inform you that, over the next few weeks, our kitchen area will be under construction as we re-model.

As our company continues to grow, we feel it necessary to provide more communal dining space and we are grateful to our facilities team for their hard work in making that happen.

If you have questions or concerns regarding the re-model, you can access the full report here. In the meantime, we are sorry for the inconvenience.

In between the weeks of December 1 - December 31, please use the kitchen on the second floor if you need a microwave. We will also keep that kitchen stocked per usual with snacks and s

Memo writing is technical writing with its sleeves rolled up.

- A memo is a document typically used
- for communication within a company.
- memos can be as formal as a business letter and used to present a report.
- Heading and overall tone make a memo different from a business letter.
- do not include a formal salutation or closing remark..

- It is important to have your audience and purpose clearly defined, because this will help you determine what information to include.
- Generally memos follow a particular format.
- Memos are used for interoffice communication. They are less formal.

- They do convey important information, so they should be clear, carefully arranged, and neat, easy to understand and easy to find the main point.
 - the word "Memo" or "Interoffice Correspondence" centered at the top of the page.
 - On the left margin is the date, who the memo is to, who it is from, and the subject of the memo.
- A memo may be directed to one person or a specified group of people.

Purpose of a Memo

- Memos solve problems either by informing the reader about new information, like policy changes, price increases, etc., or by persuading the reader to take an action, such as attend a meeting, use less paper, or change a current production procedure.
- memos are most effective when they connect the purpose of the writer with the interests and needs of the reader.

- Heading

Heading provides information about who will receive the memo, who is sending the memo, the date, and the memo's subject. This information may be bolded or highlighted in some way. For example:

- TO:
- FROM:
- DATE:
- SUBJECT:

- It may be a good idea to include your job title and your reader's.

Message

- Memos are reproduced and exchanged rather freely, and it is common for a reader to receive a memo that is only marginally relevant to him or her.
- It is important that the first sentence of the memo should answer that question with a purpose statement. The best purpose statements are concise and direct.

- Your memo's message should also provide a context for readers. In other words, always tell your readers why you are writing. Consider the following questions:

1. Is your memo a result of a situation? For instance, "As a result of yesterday's meeting..."
2. Is your memo a reminder? For example, "The Proposal is due July 2."

Tone

- Since you typically send memos to those working within your company, you can use a more informal tone than a business letter.
- For example, you might refer to your colleagues by their first names or use humor. Always keep in mind that you still need to be professional.

- Ask yourself how the company's president would react to your memo.
- If you would be embarrassed to have the president read your memo, consider changing or eliminating information.

Length

- Memos are generally short, concise documents.
- However, you may have to write longer memos, depending on your topic.
- For example, a memo might present the new guidelines for a specific office task.
- Obviously, if you have over forty guidelines, the memo will be more than a page.

- Some memos might even introduce a short report. In this case, you might include the report in the memo, or the memo might be a separate document, introducing the report.

Format Guidelines

1. Memos have one-inch margins around the page and are on plain paper
2. All lines of the memo begin at the left margin
3. The text begins two spaces after the subject line
4. The body of the memo is single-spaced, with two spaces between paragraphs

5. Second-page headings are used, as in business letters

6. The second page includes who the Memo is to, the page number, and the date.

7. The sender usually signs the Memo using initials, first name, or complete name

Memos differ from letters in several important ways:

1. Memos are almost always used within an organization
2. Memos are usually unceremonious in style.
3. Memos are normally used for non-sensitive communication (communication to which the reader will not have an emotional reaction)

4. Memos are short and to-the-point

5. Memos have a direct style.

6. Memos do not have a salutation

7. Memos do not have a complimentary closing.

8. Memos have a specific format that is very different from a business letter

Session on Minute Taking

Aspects of minute-taking as a profession

Who takes the minutes -
where, why and how?

1. What is to be understood by minute-taking?

Minute-taking comprises two activities:

- 1) to note down in a concise way the matters that are being dealt with and decided on during a meeting;
- 2) the editing of these notes to produce the minutes of the meeting.

2. Reasons for professional minute-taking

- The level of the meeting dictates the need for professional minute-taking:
 - a minute-taker with sufficient expertise
 - certainty about getting draft-minutes

3. Who is taking the minutes on a professional basis?

- Minute-taking:

- from time to time, as part of the job
- as one's main occupation

- while being:

- an employee
- a freelancer

4. The difference between minute-taker and stenographer

- Verbatim reporting by stenographers
 - a general applicable proficiency
- Registration of managerial, administrative matters by a minute-taker
 - requires special knowledge

5. Concise reporting

- On behalf of committees aiming at:
 - taking stock of opinions
 - negotiation
 - trying to reach a common opinion
- The importance of special knowledge and experience

6. Where is it that professional minute-taking takes place?

- meetings of a managerial, administrative, official character
- deliberating, advisory bodies

7. Why is minute-taking done?

- to have decisions and agreements in writing
- to monitor their execution

8. How are the minutes taken?

- ordinary handwriting (longhand)
- notebook
- pen shorthand
- sound recording

9. Standards for professional minutes

Professional minutes must be:

- truthful
- concise but basically complete
- neutral, well-balanced and objective
- ready in time before the next meeting
- clearly structured
- orthographically and grammatically faultless
- readable

10. Standards for professional minute-takers

- an adequate educational background
- adequate mastery of the spoken and written language
- being able to take notes rapidly
- being able to distinguish matters of first importance
- knowledge of the sphere of action of the meeting
- knowledge of the relevant meeting procedures
- being able to make the draft-minutes within a fairly short time
- trustworthy and ready to serve in the interest of the meeting
- an objective attitude towards participants and their opinions

MINUTES OF THE MEETING

Minutes of meeting: definition

- Minutes of meeting are a written record of what took place at a meeting (Taylor, 2004)
- Minutes are the official records of an organization. It is crucial that they are accurate since they are the legal record of the proceedings and actions of the organization (Sylvester, 2014)
- Minutes should be written in the past tense using third person and reported speech.

WHAT ARE MEETING MINUTES?

- ❖ Minutes of Meeting describe specify what was discussed and decided in a meeting.
- ❖ permanent record of the meeting for future reference.
- ❖ Include an overview of the structure of the meeting.

❖ Note down in a concise way the matters that are being dealt with and decided on during a meeting and to produce the minutes of the meeting to every one.

FORMAT OF MINUTES

- Generally, minutes begin with the organization name, place, date, list of people present, absent and the time.
- All the agenda for the said meeting.
- All official decisions must be included.
- The reports given and the person involve
- The vote tally may also be included

CONT.....

- The date, time and place of the next meeting.
- Assignments and the person responsible.
- The minutes may end with a note of the time that the meeting was adjourned.

IMPORTANCE OF MEETING MINUTES?

- Confirm any decisions made
- Record of any agreed actions to be taken
- Record of who has been allocated any tasks or responsibilities
- Provide details of the meeting to anyone unable to attend
- Serve as a record of the meeting's procedure and outcome

WHAT TASKS ARE INVOLVED IN TAKING MINUTES?

- ☐ Make A Short Summary About The Meetings Agenda
- ☐ Make A List Of All The Details Beforehand
- ☐ Recording The Body Of The Minutes
- ☐ Concluding The Minutes
- ☐ Distributing The Minutes Among The Attendees

FORMS OF RECORDING MINUTES

- 📅 Video Recording
- 📅 Audio Recording
- 📅 Hand Recording

THE BODY OF THE MINUTES

- ☐ Name of the organization
- ☐ Date and time the meeting
- ☐ Those present and those who could not attend
- ☐ A list of the agenda items/topics
- ☐ Summary of discussion for each agenda item
- ☐ The actions people committed to
- ☐ Summary of any decisions made

STYLES OF MINUTES

- ❖ Minutes of Narration – These include some of the discussions and important details. This style of minutes is considered a legal document.
- ❖ Report – This is a full record of all discussions that includes the names of all speakers, movers and seconders of any motions, written in a narrative style.
- ❖ Minutes of Resolution – These are limited to the recording of the actual words of all resolutions that were passed. Movers and seconders are not recorded. Each resolution that is made commences RESOLVED THAT. This style of minutes is also considered a legal document.

ESSENTIALS OF TAKING THE MINUTES

- ❏ Record simple short statements which capture decisions passed and actions agreed upon under each of the agenda headings
- ❏ Keep it brief & to the point
- ❏ Circulate within a week
- ❏ Impersonal tone
- ❏ Reported speech

INSTRUCTIONS

- ☐ Typing meeting minutes on a laptop can make the process quicker and easier.
- ☐ Make a note of who is present. If necessary, pass around a sign-in sheet.
- ☐ Use the meeting agenda as an outline for the minutes.
- ☐ Details do not belong in meeting minutes. Do write down any motions and decisions made and the key findings of any committee reports.

CONT.....

- ☐ Use bullet points to make the minutes easier to read. Each bullet statement should represent a different finding, discussion, or decision.
- ☐ Make a note of issues that were tabled until future meetings
- ☐ Record or review minutes as soon as possible after the meeting, while your memory of what happened is still fresh.
- ☐ Before you submit the meeting minutes, proofread for types.

THANK YOU

Chapter Two: Narrative Essays

Narrative Essays

- What is a Narrative Essay?

A narrative Essay tells a story.

- Even though the narrative essay has the same basic form as most other academic essays, it allows the writer to be more creative than academic essay usually do.

Narrative Essays

- Several important elements make up a story:

- 1) Setting : the location where the action in a story happens.
- 2) Theme: the basic idea of the story. Very often the theme will deal with a topic that is common in life or human nature, such as greed, envy, love, independence, and so on.
- 3) Mode: the feeling or atmosphere that the writer creates for the story. It could be happy, hopeful, suspenseful, or scary. Both the setting and descriptive vocabulary create the mood in a narrative.

Narrative Essays

- 4) Characters: the people in the story. They are affected by the mood, and they react to the events in which they are involved.
- 5) Plot: what happens in the story, that is, the sequence of events. The plot often includes a climax or turning point at which the characters or events change.

An effective narrative essay includes these elements:

- ❖ a thesis that sets up the action in the introduction
- ❖ transition sentences that connect events and help the reader to follow the story
- ❖ a conclusion that ends the story action and provide a moral, prediction, or revelation

Narrative Essays

- The Introduction:

The introduction is the paragraph that begins your story. This is where you describe the setting, introduce the characters, and prepare the reader for the action to come. Of course, the introduction should have a hook and a thesis.

- ✓ The Narrative Hook:

Usually the first sentence or two- that grabs readers' attention. Hooks are especially important in narrative essays because they help “set the stage” for the story. The hook makes readers start guessing about what will happen next.

Narrative Essays

An example of a good hook:

I had never been more anxious in my life. I had just spent the last three endless hours trying to get to the airport so that I could travel home.

It makes the reader asks:

Who is the narrator and why is he or she anxious?

Where is the airport?

What made the trip to the airport seem endless?

Why is this person going home?

Practice: activity 1 page 41

Narrative Essays

✓ The Thesis

Usually the thesis states the main idea of the essay and tells what the organization of the information will be. However, in a narrative essay the thesis introduce the action that begins in the first paragraph of the essay.

Examples of thesis statements:

Now, as I watched the bus driver set my luggage on the airport sidewalk, I realized that my frustration had only just begun.

Because his pride wouldn't allow him to apologize, Ken now had to fight the bully, and he was pretty sure that he wouldn't win.

The example sentences do not tell the reader what happens. They only introduce the action that will follow. The paragraph in the body will develop the story.

Narrative Essays

- The Body:

The body of your narrative essay contains most of the plot- the supporting information. The action in the plot can be organized in many different ways.

- ❑ chronological, or time order in this method each paragraph gives more information about the story as it proceeds in time: the first paragraph usually describe the first event, the second paragraph describes the second event and so on.

Narrative Essays

- Transitional Sentences:

In a chronological organization, each paragraph ends with a transitional sentence. Transitional sentences have two purposes:

- 1) To signal the end of action in one paragraph
- 2) To provide a link to the action of the next paragraph.

These sentences are vital because they give your story unity and allow the reader to follow the action easily.

See page 42 for examples.

Narrative Essays

- The conclusion:

Like academic essays, narrative essays need to have concluding ideas. In the concluding paragraph, you finish describing the action in the essay. The final sentence can have two functions:

- 1) It can deliver the moral for the story, or tell the reader what the characters learned from the experience.
- 2) It can make a prediction or a revelation (disclosure of something that was not known before) about future actions that will happen as a result of the events in the story.

❑ Effective narrative essays (writer's note)

There are three elements in an effective narrative essay:

1. A thesis that sets up the action in the introduction
2. Transition sentences that connect events and help the reader follow the story.
3. A conclusion that ends the story action and provides a moral or revelation.

Narrative Paragraph

What is Narrative writing?

Narrative
Writing
tells a story.

Source:

What is Narrative Paragraph?

- Narrative paragraph tells a story or an event.
- It could be tale, novel, an account of one's life, natural phenomena, or social events...
- The story/events in narrative paragraph should be arranged chronologically (time order), that is in the order in which they have happened.

What is Narrative Paragraph?

- Almost everyone narrates, reads, or listens to stories from books, other people, or media. However, the audience expects and needs more from a written narrative.
- Therefore, a narrative paragraph must have:
 - a central idea (what the story/event is about),
 - characters (who it is about),
 - a plot (conflict, complication, climax, and resolution of the story/event),
 - adequate description,
 - and setting (when and where the story happens).

Organizing a Narrative Paragraph

- A good narrative paragraph normally requires three necessary components:
 - background information,
 - the story/event (a summary),
 - and the conclusion.

Organizing a Narrative Paragraph:

1. Background information

The background information sets the scene for the audience. It includes the following pieces of information:

- A topic sentence,
- What story/event is about,
- Who it is about,
- When it happens,
- Where it happens,
- Where is the source of the narration.

Note: the topic sentence of a narrative paragraph does not start the narration. It establishes a purpose. It does not tell only a story, but also the reader's view point. Therefore, writing a strong topic sentence is important.

Organizing a Narrative Paragraph:

2. The Story / Event

The story or event happens at 3 different stages: the beginning, the middle, and the end of the story or event.

- The beginning of the story – the beginning tells what happens first in the story. It can be the problem which makes the story or event happen.
- The middle of the story – the middle tells the main events or important activities of the story/event.
- The end of the story – the end tells the final events, i.e. the result or what brings the end of the story/event.

Organizing a Narrative Paragraph:

1. Background information

The background information sets the scene for the audience. It includes the following pieces of information:

- A topic sentence,
- What story/event is about,
- Who it is about,
- When it happens,
- Where it happens,
- Where is the source of the narration.

Note: the topic sentence of a narrative paragraph does not start the narration. It establishes a purpose. It does not tell only a story, but also the reader's view point. Therefore, writing a strong topic sentence is important.

Organizing a Narrative Paragraph:

3. The Conclusion

It is a concluding sentence. The writer can either

- restate the topic sentence,
- give a concluding remark,
- make a prediction about the story,
- or make a suggestion.

Sample

Tum Teav

(1) Tum Teav is an interesting story. (2) The story is a real love tragedy happened in the 16th century in presently Kampong Cham province. (3) It is widely taught in high school. (4) The story begins when Tum and Teav fall in love at their first sight. (5) Their love is so deep that they have abused the traditional barriers and engaged in a pre- marriage love affair – it is strongly prohibited in Khmer culture. (6) Not long after, Teav's mum arranges a marriage with rich guy for Teav, but fails. (7) Then, Teav is selected as a concubine and sent to the capital. (8) The king admires her so much, but with mercy he offers Tum and Teav a wedding. (9) As dissatisfaction grows, Teav's mum rearranges the marriage with the previous guy. (10) Teav is deceived and comes back home. (11) With worry, Tum follows her. (12) Tum arrival at Teav's wedding marks end of the story. (13) Tum is caught and executed. (14) Teav, with love for her husband, commits suicide. (15) The couple death outrages the king that he orders execution for those involved in the tragedy. (16) The story, I believe, is so appealing.

Sample Explanation

- The topic sentence is sentence (1). It tells the purpose, that's what the writer will write about.
- The background information includes sentences (2) and (3). Sentence (2) tells what the story is about, and when and where it happens. Sentence (3) tells the source of the story.
- The story comprises of sentence (4) to (15).
 - Sentence (4) and (5) tell the beginning of the story.
 - Sentence (6)-(11), which is middle of the story, tell the main events happen in the story.
 - Sentence (12)-(15) tells the end of the story.
- Sentence (16) is the concluding sentence. It restates the topic sentence.

My Shopping Norte's Nightmare

(1) I'll never forget the first time I got lost in La Paz City. (2) I was traveling with my parents during summer vacation. (3) We were in a department store, and I was so excited to see such a huge place. (4) Suddenly, I turned around to ask my mom something, but she was gone! (5) I begun crying and screaming at the top of my lungs. (6) A salesclerk came up to me and dad came running toward me and ask if I was okay. (7) She got on the public address (P.A.) system and notified the customers that a little boy with blue jeans and a red cap was lost. (8) Two minutes later my mom and dad came running toward me. (9) We all cried and hugged each other. (10) I'll never forget that day as long as I live.

BAD DAY

My day was a disaster. First, it had snowed during the night, which meant I had to shovel before I could leave for work. I was mad that I hadn't gotten up earlier. Then I had trouble starting my car, and to make matters worse, my daughter wasn't feeling well and said she didn't think she should go to school. When I eventually did arrive at work, I was twenty minutes late. Soon I found out my assistant had forgotten to make copies of a report I needed at nine o'clock. I quickly had to make another plan. By five o'clock, I was looking forward to getting my paycheck. Foolish woman! When I went to pick it up, the office assistant told me that something had gone wrong with the computers. I would not be able to get my check until Tuesday. Disappointed, I walked down the hill to the parking lot. There I met my final defeat. In my hurry to park the car in the morning, I had left my parking lights on. Now my battery was dead. Even an optimist like me had the right to be discouraged!

THE MARS

*Close-up study of the planet Mars began when rockets were developed that could send scientific instruments into space. In 1965, the first observations of Mars were done by the American spacecraft Mariner 4, which flew near the planet to collect data and take photographs. Four years later, more data and photographs were collected by Mariners 6 and 7 as they flew past the planet. Then, in 1971, Mariner 9 actually went into orbit around Mars, and during the following eleven months, sent back more than 7,000 images before contact with the spacecraft was lost. The next major step, in 1976, was the landing of two Viking crafts on two different areas of Mars' surface. These landers were able to send back important data about the atmosphere of the planet.*

A Trip to the Country

One day a father and his rich family took his young son on a trip to the country with the firm purpose to show him how poor people can be. They spent a day and a night in the farm of a very poor family. When they got back from their trip the father asked his son, "How was the trip?" The boy replied, "Very good, Dad!" The father continued, "Did you see how poor people can be?" The boy just said, "Yeah!" The father asked again, "And what did you learn?" The boy answered, "I saw that we have a dog at home, and they have four. We have a pool that reaches to the middle of the garden; they have a creek that has no end. We have imported lamps in the garden, they have the stars; our patio reaches to the front yard, they have a whole horizon. When the little boy was finishing, his father was speechless. The son added, "Thanks, Dad, for showing me how poor we are!"

Activity

- Think of a story and write a short paragraph.
- Think of one of your own experiences and retell it.

Thank you for your attention!

OGTT (oral glucose tolerance test):

The glucose tolerance test, also known as the oral glucose tolerance test, measures your body's response to sugar (glucose). The glucose tolerance test can be used to screen for type 2 diabetes. More commonly, a modified version of the glucose tolerance test is used to diagnose gestational diabetes — a type of diabetes that develops during pregnancy.

Indications:

OGTT is only indicated in the following conditions:

1. Diagnosis of Gestational Diabetes Mellitus (GDM)
2. When fasting-plasma glucose is between 101 -125 mg/dl or 2 hour post-prandial glucose levels are between 140-199 mg/dl. The ADA recommends the upper limit for fasting-plasma glucose as 100mg/dl.

Preparation of the Patient:

1. The patient must be ambulatory and free from pyrexia, acute illness or trauma for at least two weeks.
2. She/he should have a diet containing at least 150 g carbohydrate/day for three days prior to taking the test.
3. Any drug that alters blood glucose levels should also be discontinued for three days prior to testing (e.g., salicylates, steroids, thiazide diuretics, anticonvulsants). If the patient is taking drugs which are known to lower the blood glucose, they should be discontinued at least on the day of the test.
4. To avoid circadian variation and to obtain a greater reproducibility, the test should be done in the morning between 7 am to 9 am.
5. The patient must have an 8-12 hours fast.
6. Heavy tea and coffee drinkers should reduce their consumption during the day preceding the test.
7. Smoking is not allowed during the fast or at least in the morning before the OGTT and also during the OGTT.
8. No physical exercise is allowed during the test.

9. The patient should be seated quietly and relaxed for 30 minutes before taking the test. 10. If not already done, it is advisable to determine the patient's fasting plasma- glucose level prior to the OGTT. Unless a case of definite hyperglycaemia exists, a glucose load is contra-indicated.

Procedure:

The WHO expert committee has recommended a 75 g glucose load for adults and 1.75 g/kg body weight up to a maximum of 75 g glucose for children (upto 15 years).

The above Glucose is mixed in 250ml of water accordingly and the patient should drink it within 5 minutes. This is zero time.

The first sample after the administration of glucose is taken after 1 hour or 60 minutes.

The second sample is taken after 2 hours or 120 minutes.

Interpretation:

A normal fasting blood glucose level is lower than 100 mg/dL.

One hour after drinking the glucose solution, a normal blood glucose level is lower than 180 mg/dL.

Two hours after drinking the glucose solution, a normal blood glucose level is lower than 155 mg/dL.

CONSEQUENCES OF GESTATIONAL DIABETES

FOR THE MOTHER

- High blood pressure
- Preeclampsia, can affect mother and baby
- Type 2 diabetes (50% develop T2D within 10 years)

FOR THE BABY

- Premature birth and malformations
- Respiratory problems
- Fetal death
- Macrosomia (excessive birth weight)
- Cesarean birth
- Hypoglycemia and hyperbilirubinemia
- Obesity and type 2 diabetes in adulthood

What is a paragraph?

A paragraph is a unit of writing that consists of one or more sentences, all of which relate to the same topic. Paragraphs are essential for organizing long pieces of writing such as novels, papers, or even emails. Each paragraph should focus on a single topic

How is a paragraph structured?

Paragraphs contain three main parts: a topic sentence, supporting sentences and a concluding sentence.

Topic sentences, also known as “paragraph leaders,” introduce the main idea that the paragraph is about. They shouldn’t reveal too much on their own, but rather prepare the reader for the rest of the paragraph by stating clearly what topic will be discussed.

The topic sentence generally is composed of two parts:

- (a) the topic itself and
- (b) the controlling idea

A topic sentence contains the topic and an opinion, or controlling idea. It is often, but not always, the first sentence of the paragraph. Paragraphs that begin with the topic sentence move from the general to the specific. They open with a general statement about a subject (and then discuss specific examples). E.g.

A nutritious diet is one way of maintaining good health.

The topic of this paragraph is maintaining good health. The controlling idea is that one way to do this is with a nutritious diet.

Supporting sentences

If you think of a paragraph as a hamburger, the supporting sentences are the meat inside the bun. They make up the body of the paragraph by explaining, proving, or enhancing the controlling idea in the topic sentence. Most paragraphs contain three to six supporting sentences, depending on the audience and purpose for writing.

The supporting sentences act as the body of the paragraph. These sentences elaborate and explain the idea with details too specific for the topic sentence, and provide evidence, opinions, or other statements that back up or confirm the paragraph’s main idea.

Last, the conclusion wraps up the idea, sometimes summarizing what’s been presented or transitioning to the next paragraph. The content of the conclusion depends on the type of paragraph, and it’s often acceptable to end a paragraph with a final piece of support that concludes the thought instead of a summary.

An effective concluding sentence draws together all the ideas you have raised in your paragraph. It reminds readers of the main point—the topic sentence—without restating it in exactly the same words. Using the hamburger example, the top bun (the topic sentence) and the bottom bun (the concluding sentence) are very similar. They frame the “meat” or body of the paragraph. Compare the topic sentence and concluding sentence from the previous example:

Topic sentence: There are numerous advantages to owning a hybrid car.

Concluding sentence: Given the low running costs and environmental benefits of owning a hybrid car, it is likely that many more people will follow Alex’s example in the near future.

Notice the use of the synonyms advantages and benefits. The concluding sentence reiterates the idea that owning a hybrid is advantageous without using the exact same words. It also summarizes two examples of the advantages covered in the supporting sentences: low running costs and environmental benefits.

You should avoid introducing any new ideas into your concluding sentence. A conclusion is intended to provide the reader with a sense of completion. Introducing a subject that is not covered in the paragraph will confuse the reader and weaken your writing

How many sentences are in a paragraph?

Most paragraphs contain between three and five sentences, but there are plenty of exceptions. Different types of paragraphs have different numbers of sentences, like those in narrative writing, in particular, where single-sentence paragraphs are common.

Likewise, the number of sentences in a paragraph can change based on the style of the writer. Some authors prefer longer, more descriptive paragraphs, while other authors prefer shorter, faster-paced paragraphs.

When it comes to nonfiction writing, like research papers or reports, most paragraphs have at least three sentences: a topic sentence, a development/support sentence, and a conclusion sentence.

Example paragraphs from literature

Rather than merely talk about paragraph structure, let's look at some paragraph examples so you can see structure in action.

The first paragraph example comes from Bertrand Russell in his essay "Icarus, or the Future of Science." This excerpt uses the same paragraph structure often used in research papers, essays, and other nonfiction writing. The first sentence makes a claim, and the subsequent sentences defend that claim, ending in a strong conclusion that ties everything together.

If men were rational in their conduct, that is to say, if they acted in the way most likely to bring about the ends that they deliberately desire, intelligence would be enough to make the world almost a paradise. In the main, what is in the long run advantageous to one man is also advantageous to another. But men are actuated by passions which distort their view; feeling an impulse to injure others, they persuade themselves that it is to their interest to do so. They will not, therefore, act in the way which is in fact to their own interest unless they are actuated by generous impulses which make them indifferent to their own interest. This is why the heart is as important as the head. By the "heart" I mean, for the moment, the sum-total of kindly impulses. Where they exist, science helps them to be effective; where they are absent, science only makes men more cleverly diabolic.

Notice how all sentences in the paragraph relate to the same idea: That humans act emotionally more than rationally. However, each sentence makes its own unique point, and when taken together, they connect to the central topic.

How to write a paragraph

Paragraph structure isn't just for the benefit of readers, it also helps authors organize their thoughts and communicate clearly. Below we explain the different steps of how to write a paragraph, from the paragraph introduction all the way to the conclusion.

How to plan a paragraph

Before you begin writing a paragraph, look at how the paragraph fits into the writing as a whole.

Ideally, you'll already have an outline for whatever you're writing, which will tell you what the paragraph is about and what to include. If not, your first step is to decide on the paragraph topic and which facts to include as support and development.

Keep in mind what comes before and after the paragraph so you can plan the right topic for the flow of your writing. It's jarring (annoying/ disturbing) for the reader when the author jumps wildly from one topic to the next, so try to keep all related paragraphs together and in a logical sequence. If that's not possible, plan your topic sentence as a segue, perhaps using a transition word.

It also helps to sketch out the parts of your paragraph: topic sentence, development and support, and conclusion. The more you prepare these parts now, the easier it will be to put them into words later.

How to transition within a paragraph

It's not enough to just throw all your support sentences into a paragraph and hope for the best. For the convenience of your reader, it's best to connect the sentences in a way that lets the reader move from one point to the next without getting confused.

While some paragraph sentences will run together on their own, sometimes you need transition sentences to assist the flow. Transition sentences make use of transition words like "however," "therefore," or "similarly," or sometimes directly reference the preceding sentence.

Consider the sentence in Russell's paragraph example: "This is why the heart is as important as the head." If Russell had said only "The heart is as important as the head," it would have created an abrupt tone—he adds "this is why" to ease the transition.

If your sentences create a list, such as instructions, you can transition from one item to another using ordinals like “first,” “second,” “third,” etc. Ordinals work well with difficult transitions because they can fit almost any paragraph.

How/when to end a paragraph

When you’ve said everything you need to say about a topic, it’s time to end the paragraph. If the paragraph looks like it’s too long after you’ve said everything, consider breaking it up into separate topics and paragraphs for the sake of the reader. The best way to end a paragraph is to sum up the topic with all the new information from the support sentences. In the excerpt from Dracula, Stoker concludes with an overall impression of the Count from all the details listed in the previous sentences.

However, it’s not always necessary to restate the topic, which can sometimes come across as padding.

It’s equally viable to end a sentence stating one final piece of support. In these instances, it’s best to conclude with the piece of information that has the most profound effect, as with Northup’s excerpt.

Appropriate form of verbs in paragraph

The appropriate form of verbs in writing is essential for clear and effective communication. Verbs play a fundamental role in conveying the action, time, and mood of a sentence. Here are some key considerations for using verbs effectively in your writing;

1. Tense consistency: Maintaining consistent verb tenses within a sentence or paragraph is crucial. Shifting between past, present, and future tenses can confuse readers and disrupt the flow of your writing. Choose the tense that best suits the context and stick with it.

- Incorrect: “She is studying yesterday, but she will work on the project tomorrow’.
- Correct: “She studied yesterday, and she will work on the project tomorrow”.

Active voice: Whenever possible, use the active voice to make your writing more direct and engaging. In active voice, the subject performs the action, which often leads to clearer and more concise sentences.

- Passive: “The report was written by John.”
- Active: “John wrote the report.”

Conciseness: Avoid using unnecessarily complex verb forms when simpler ones will suffice. Overly complex verb structures can make your writing convoluted and difficult to understand.

- Complex: "He is currently engaged in the process of writing a novel."
- Simplified: "He is currently writing a novel."

Subject-Verb Agreement: Ensure that verbs agree in person and number with their subjects. Singular subjects should have singular verbs, and plural subjects should have plural verbs.

- Incorrect: "The team are playing well."
- Correct: "The team is playing well."

Mood and Tone: Pay attention to mood and tone when selecting verb forms. For formal or academic writing, use the indicative mood for factual statements. In creative writing, the subjunctive mood may be used for hypothetical scenarios or wishes.

- Indicative: "The data suggests a strong correlation."
- Subjunctive: "If I were to win the lottery, I would travel the world."

Transitions: Use appropriate verb forms to indicate transitions in time or action. This helps readers follow the sequence of events or ideas in your writing.

- To indicate a sequence of actions: "First, she prepared the ingredients. Then, she started cooking."

Variety: While maintaining consistency is important, introducing some variety in verb choices can make your writing more engaging. Avoid using the same verbs repeatedly.

- Instead of repeatedly using "said," consider: "She exclaimed," "He remarked," "They whispered."

Precise Language: Choose verbs that precisely convey the intended action or emotion. Avoid vague or generic verbs that do not add depth to your writing.

- Vague: "She did something to help."
- Specific: "She volunteered her time to assist."

Sentences in a logical order in paragraph

Arranging sentences in a logical order within a paragraph is crucial for ensuring that your writing is coherent and easy to follow. Here are some strategies to help you organize your sentences effectively:

Topic Sentence: Start your paragraph with a clear and concise topic sentence that introduces the main idea or point you will discuss in that paragraph. This sentence sets the tone and provides a roadmap for the reader.

Chronological Order: If your paragraph discusses a series of events or steps in a process, consider presenting them in chronological order. This approach helps readers follow a sequence of actions or developments.

Spatial Order: When describing a physical space or location, arrange your sentences in spatial order, moving from one location to another. This approach helps readers visualize the scene.

Order of Importance: Arrange your sentences from the most important point to the least important or vice versa. This can help build a persuasive argument or emphasize key ideas.

Compare and Contrast: If you're comparing and contrasting two or more ideas, objects, or concepts, decide on an order that makes the comparison clear. You might start with similarities and then move on to differences or vice versa.

Problem-Solution: When addressing a problem and its potential solutions, you can present the problem first and then offer solutions

General to Specific or Specific to General: Begin with a general statement and then gradually narrow it down to specific details. Alternatively, start with specific details and then make a broader point or conclusion.

Quotation or Example: If you plan to include a quotation or example in your paragraph, introduce it with context and explanation.

Read Aloud: After writing your paragraph, read it aloud to yourself. This can help you identify any awkward or unclear sentence order.

Remember that the specific order you choose will depend on the content and purpose of your paragraph. The goal is to make your writing as clear and coherent as possible, ensuring that your readers can easily follow your train of thought.

Meaning of words in a paragraph

The meaning of words within a paragraph is essential for understanding the overall message and context of the text. In the context of a paragraph, individual words contribute to the paragraph's purpose, convey information, and help convey the author's message or argument. Here are a few key points regarding the meaning of words in a paragraph:

Context Matters: The meaning of a word can change depending on the context in which it appears. Words often have multiple meanings, and the intended meaning is determined by the surrounding words and the overall context of the paragraph.

e.g. 'I am hell tired.'

"He is a bright child" can mean two things. Either it means "filled with light" or "smart".

Denotation and Connotation: Words have denotative (literal) and connotative (emotional or implied) meanings. Understanding both aspects of a word's meaning is important in comprehending a paragraph fully.

E.g. She is the apple of my eye.

Precision: Authors choose words carefully to convey their intended message. Precise word choices can make a paragraph more informative and persuasive.

Figurative Language: Authors may use figurative language, such as metaphors, similes, or idioms, to add depth to their writing. Understanding the figurative meanings of these expressions is crucial for comprehension.

e.g 'My mother is as busy as bee.' Simile is used here.

'Her smile is the sunrise.' Metaphor is used here

Jargon and Specialized Terminology: In technical or specialized writing, specific terminology or jargon may be used. Readers must understand these specialized meanings to grasp the content fully.

Word Relationships: Words within a paragraph often have relationships with one another, such as synonyms, antonyms. Recognizing these relationships adds in understanding the text.

Ambiguity: Occasionally, authors intentionally use ambiguous words or phrases to create suspense or provoke thought. In such cases, readers may need to consider multiple interpretations.

Diction: The author's choice of diction (word selection) can reveal their tone, attitude, and style. Understanding the author's diction contributes to a deeper understanding of the text.

In summary, the meaning of words within a paragraph is integral to comprehending the content, tone, and purpose of the text. Readers should consider the context, connotation, and relationships among words to fully grasp the author's message and intention. Additionally, recognizing how words contribute to the overall structure and flow of the paragraph adds in understanding the text's logical progression.

TYPES OF PARAGRAPH

1. Descriptive

We use a descriptive paragraph to describe something or someone to your audience. We frequently choose this style if you wish to give specifics about something or an event. The ideal descriptive paragraph should create a vivid picture that makes the reader feel as though they are there.

2. Narrative Paragraphs

A narrative paragraph's goal is to describe an instance or a tale. It might be an occurrence in nature, a personal story, or a book.

The narrative paragraph's events should be ordered chronologically by the author. They should therefore appear in the sequence in which they occurred.

3. Persuasive Paragraphs

The author expresses his viewpoint on the issue or subject in the persuasive paragraph. Such a paragraph aims to persuade the reader to agree with the writer's position on a contentious issue or undertaking.

4. Explanatory Paragraphs

If you need to explain how a specific thing operates, you must use an explanation paragraph. If you are stepping someone through a process, you can sue that person. Such a paragraph would provide the reader with specific information regarding a particular issue.

5. Illustration Paragraphs

Authors use such a paragraph to explain an idea by providing specific examples. However, you should explain how they connect to the main ideas.

Persuasive Writing

Persuasive Writing

Persuasive writing is writing that tries to convince a reader to do something or to believe what you believe about a certain topic.

It takes a position for or against something.

"He's trying to talk them into giving themselves up!"

Persuasive Writing can be used to...

Purpose	Persuasive Statement
• Support a cause	• “Please support my football team by buying discount coupons.”
• Urge people to action	• “Vote for Sarah!”
• Make a change	• “The principal should let us wear hats.”
• Prove something wrong	• “Cell phones don’t cause brain cancer.”

Persuasive Writing can be used to...

Purpose	Persuasive Statement
• Stir up sympathy	• “If you don’t adopt this dog, it could have to live in a shelter.”
• Create interest	• “Better grades get you a better job and more money.”
• Get people to agree with you	• “I am sure you’ll agree that Milky Way is the best candy bar.”

Persuasive writing follows a certain format:

- INTRODUCTION with a “hook” and thesis statement
- BODY where the argument is explained
- CONCLUSION where main points are summarized and reviewed and the reader is left with something to think about.

First...Know Your Audience...

- Before you start writing, you should know your audience:
 - Who will read your writing? Who do you need to convince?
 - The audience may be your friends, your teacher, your parents, your principal, the readers of a newspaper or the President of the United States!
 - Will you be graded? On What?
 - Should you be casual or professional?

Second...Pick a side!

- The writer must clearly state his/her position and stay with that position. Pick a side!

- Generally, the position is stated in the opening paragraph or introduction.

Three: Do Your Research...

In order to convince the reader you need more than just an opinion; you need facts or examples to back your opinion. So, be sure to do the research!

Four: MAKE A PLAN, then write!

The 6 Paragraph Essay:

1. Introduction/Hook/Thesis
2. Argument 1 with support
3. Argument 2 with support
4. Argument 3 with support
5. Show the counter-argument and make an argument against it
6. Conclusion

DOS and DON'Ts of Persuasive Writing:

- Do:

- Divide into 6 paragraphs
- Have a thesis statement in your introduction
- Come up with 3 main points to support your argument—these will be your 3 body paragraphs
- Show the “counter-argument”
- Have a conclusion that has a “clincher statement”
- Come up with a catchy title

- Don't :

- Don't begin with “Hello my name is ___ and I'm going to write about _ _”
- Don't use the word “I”
“ (Instead of “I think we shouldn't wear uniforms” say “Uniforms shouldn't be required.”
- Don't be wishy-washy. Pick a side!
- Don't forget to support your opinions with facts and examples

The Great Introduction...

What makes an good introduction?

- It grabs or “hooks” the reader’s attention by using one or more of the following strategies:
 - An anecdote or scenario
 - A quotation
 - An interesting fact or statistic
 - A question
- It tells how the writing will be organized.
- The author’s position is clearly stated in a thesis statement.

Grabbing Your Audience...

Good strategies used in introductions:

- Use an Anecdote/ Scenario
 - The writer provides a personal experience or made-up situation to introduce the position.
- Questioning
 - The writer asks thought-provoking questions to capture the reader's interest.
- Interesting fact or statistic
 - The writer gives an interesting piece of information to grab the reader's attention.

Lets Take A Look...

You Could Start with a Riddle:

- Get your reader's attention with a challenging thought.
- "What's plain, and boring? What makes all students in a school building look the same and lose their individuality? If you guessed UNIFORMS, you're correct!"

You Could Begin with a Strong Statement:

- Example:
- Fast food consumption has risen 500 percent since 1970 and today reaches nearly every part of society, including some public school cafeterias.

You Could Open with a Quotation:

- Example:

University of Delaware professor states:

“Advertising, including television ads, billboards, and other advertising, including toys in boxed meals, has had an effect upon children as never before.

Children these days are growing up with low concern for their health and more concern for what tastes good.”

You Could Open with a interesting fact:

- Example:
- “Did you know that a typical child needs 2,000 calories for an entire day and Burger King’s Whopper with triple cheese has 1,230 calories?”

You Could Open with an Anecdote:

- An anecdote can provide an amusing and attention-getting opening if it is short and to the point.

- “My hands felt sticky after pulling open the doors to “Big Bobby’s Boisterous Burger Hut”. The odor smelled of fried everything. I ordered a Big Bobby Combo #2. There was enough food to serve a small third world country on my tray. I nibbled at the $\frac{3}{4}$ pound burger and my chin was covered in a mayonnaise and ketchup concoction. I asked the server if I could have a few fries with my salt. I left the place feeling like my stomach was mad at me.”

You Could Open with a Fact or Statistic:

- Example:

- Thirty percent of the children in the survey ate fast food on any given day during the survey, and they ate an average of 187 calories a day more than those who did not eat fast food. These additional calories could account for an extra six pounds of weight gain per year, according to Ludwig.

You Could Open with a Question:

- How many times have you eaten fast food this month?

Open with an Outrageous Statement:

- Example:
- “Fast food is killing America!”

Next: Creating a Thesis Statement

- A thesis statement is one sentence at the end of your introduction that states your opinion. It needs to be strong.
- First, choose 3 main focus points to discuss in your essay. These points will become the focus of three paragraphs in the body of your paper.

Let's use fast food as an example again.

Fast food...(3 Discussion Points)

- rapidly increases weight
- causes high blood pressure
 - leads to sluggishness

Writing the Thesis Statement

- Now take your three main focus points and summarize them. Put your completed thesis statement at the end of your first paragraph.

THREEMAIN FOCUSPOINTS

- I believe fast food is harmful because it rapidly increases weight, causes high blood pressure, and leads to lethargy.

COMPLETED THESIS STATEMENT

- I believe fast food has negative health effects.

Our Introductory Paragraph:

CATCHY TITLE

Fast Foods Killing America

HOOK THE READER

Did you know that a typical child needs 2,000 calories for an entire day and Burger King's Whopper with triple cheese has 1,230 calories? That is far more calories than anyone needs in one day! Fast food consumption has risen 500 percent since 1970 and today reaches nearly every part of society, including some public school cafeterias. Fast food is harmful because it rapidly increases weight, causes high blood pressure, and leads to sluggishness. Fast food is bad for your health!

THESES STATEMENT

YOUR THREE ARGUMENTS

Walsh Publishing Co. 2009

Three Supporting Paragraphs:

- Use each of the main arguments you used in your introductory paragraph and expand on each giving facts and reasons.
- In our example, you would write one paragraph on how fast food increases weight, one paragraph on how it causes high blood pressure and one on how it leads to sluggishness.

You'll Need to Show "The Other Side..."

- How many of you have been in a discussion with someone and you remember saying, "Yeah, that's true, but..." This is called a counter-argument. It's the "other side" of the argument.
- You'll need to tell your reader what the counter-argument is and prove why it shouldn't matter.
- Let's take a look using our example of fast food...

The Other Side of the Story

- This is where you should explain why your opposition believes what they believe.
- For example:
- “A fast food company wouldn’t agree with the points in this essay. They would have lots of reasons why fast food is good. They may say...”it’s convenient” or “It’s fine if eaten in moderation.” These arguments just don’t hold up when you take all the facts into consideration!

Conclude or End Your Essay...

What makes an good conclusion?

- Last paragraph summarizes your main point.
- End using one or more of the following strategies:

- Call the reader to action

- Anecdote or scenario

- Make a Prediction

- The last paragraph wraps up the writing and gives the reader something to think about.

Strategies for Conclusions

- Call to Action
 - Ask the reader to do something or to make something happen “I challenge you to watch what you eat and to avoid fast food.”
- Provide a solution
 - Provide an answer to the problem “Fast food doesn’t have to be “bad food.” Make better choices like salads, fruit and low fat treats.”
- Make a Prediction
 - Explain what might be the consequences of action or inaction “If people continue to eat lots of fast food, they put their health at risk. If kids don’t make better choices today, they won’t grow into healthy adults.”

Concluding Paragraph:

Restate your thesis.

In closing, it's important to remember that too much fast food can have negative effects on your health. If not eaten in moderation, you can gain weight, suffer from high blood pressure and become slow and sluggish. Is it worth the risk to your body? Eat Healthy and Make good choices!

End with...

- A comment (Don't make your body suffer!)
- A question (Are you willing to risk your health?)
- A call to action (I highly recommend you consider your options the next time your faced with a decision about what to eat.)

Review: The Persuasive Essay:

- A Catchy Title
- Introductory paragraph with a “hook”, three main arguments and a thesis statement.
- One paragraph for each of your three arguments.
- Address the “counter-argument”
- Closing paragraph that re-states your thesis and challenges the reader to think about it.

Don't Forget...

- Make sure to read over your work and edit for mechanics and spelling.
- Write neatly!
- Include detail and great vocabulary.
- Follow proper format:
Proper heading and skip lines!

The background of the slide features a decorative design. The top portion consists of several overlapping, wavy, horizontal bands in shades of light blue and teal. Below these bands, the entire background is covered in a fine, uniform halftone dot pattern. The text 'Introduction to Presentation Skills' is centered horizontally and positioned in the upper half of the slide, rendered in a teal color that matches the top decorative elements.

Introduction to Presentation Skills

Presentation Skills

PREPARATION AND PLANNING

1. ESSENTIAL PREPARATION AND PLANNING CHECKLIST

Given below is checklist of the essential elements to consider in preparing and planning an oral presentation. Use it yourself by filling in the boxes on the right under “My Ideas”.

Presentation Checklist

QUESTIONS TO ASK YOURSELF	EXAMPLES	MY IDEAS
1. What is the aim?	✓ to buy my product ✓ to adopt my recommendations ✓ to join the club ✓ to give me a job
2. What is my title?	✓ The new Nokia 2013 ✓ How to reduce production costs ✓ The INT Chess Club
3. Who am I speaking to?	✓ What are the benefits to the audience of my product/report/speech? ✓ Are these people the decision makers? ✓ What do they know of the subject? ✓ How does this change my approach? ✓ What sort of questions will they ask me? What are the answers? ✓ What aspects will they be interested in?
4. What are the main points I want to make?	1, 2, 3; first, second, third; point a, point b, point c
5. What do I want the audience to do after listening to my presentation?	We must invite them: ✓ to buy my product ✓ to accept my findings ✓ to join the club ✓ to give me a job

Other questions concerning physical aspects.

- Who is the audience?
- How many people will there be in the audience?
- Check beforehand, if you can, the place where you are going to make your presentation.
- Where will it take place?
- How big is the room?
- What equipment is there in the room? What equipment do I need?
- Does the equipment work?
- Are you going to need a black or whiteboard?
- Have you got chalk and / or a felt tip pen?

Questions concerning physical aspect

- Do you need an overhead projector or a screen?
- Are they in place? Is there a podium? Where are you going to
- put your notes /papers /transparencies?
- Do you need an adapter or extension lead?
- Can the information be seen?
- Can you present the information and not get in the way?
- Do you need a pointer?
- Will you need to dim the lights or draw the curtains?
- Are you going to need handouts or any other documents?
How many? Do they
- present a good image of you and your company?

Questions concerning physical aspect

• When?

- What time of day is it? What day is it? Will the audience be more or less receptive
- when listening?

• How long?

- In relation to what the audience knows or time constraints, what can I eliminate if
- necessary?

• Other

- Am I dressed appropriately? Shoes polished? Are my hands and fingernails clean?

STRUCTURE OF AN ORAL PRESENTATION

- A good oral presentation is well structured; this makes it easier for the listener to follow.
- Basically there are three parts to a typical presentation: the beginning, the middle and the end (or introduction, body and conclusion).
- We are going to look at each part in turn and present the language needed to express both the structure and the content.

Types of Presentation

1) THE BEGINNING OR THE INTRODUCTION:

- The beginning of a presentation is the most important part. It is when you establish a rapport with the audience and when you have its attention.

2) Get the audience's attention and signal the start

- Right. Well. OK. Erm. Let's begin.
- Good. Fine.
- Great. Can we start?
- Shall we start?
- Let's get down to business.
- Let's get the ball rolling.

Greeting Audience

- It is important to greet the audience by saying something like:
- Hello ladies and gentlemen.
- Good morning members of the jury.
- Good afternoon esteemed guests
- Good evening members of the board
- Fellow colleagues Mr. Chairman/Chairwoman
- Thank you for your kind introduction

Introduce oneself (name, position, and company)

- Do this not only to give important information so people can identify you but also to establish your authority on the subject and to allow the audience to see your point of view on the subject (you are a student, researcher, responsible for, director of, neophyte (someone who has just started to learn), layman).
- Good afternoon ladies and gentlemen, let me introduce myself.
- I am a student at Abasyn University.
- I am an undergraduate candidate.
- I am X. Y. from AB.C. I'm the manager of... X.Y.Z etc
- I am a researcher from ... I've been working on the subject now for X years...
- I've had wide experience in the field of

Give title and introduce subject

- What exactly are you going to speak about? Situate the subject in time and place, in relation to the audience and/or give a rough idea or a working definition of the subject.
- I plan to speak about...*
- Today I'm going to talk about...*
- The subject of my presentation is...*
- The theme of my talk is...*
- I've been asked to give you an overview of...*
- Cultural aspects may be important here; scientists want to demonstrate their work and findings while managers and humanities people want to share ideas and reflections with their audience.
- Why are you going to speak about it?
- I have chosen to speak about this because...*

Setting limit to the scope of the talk

- What won't you speak about?

- It may be very useful to eliminate certain areas before you start so as to avoid confusion or deviation from your main task. It also protects you from criticism later for not covering certain aspects or issues.

- Have you estimated the time it will take?

- It is useful to give the listeners some idea of how long you will speak so as to maintain their attention better.

- I will not speak about...

- I have limited my speech to

- My talk will last about 15 minutes

Acknowledging Contribution of Sponsoring Organization

- You may want to give acknowledgements here too. If you have been sponsored, supported or encouraged by a particular firm, organization, professor, etc. you may want to recognize their contribution.
- Your research and paper may have been the
- work of a collaborative effort and you should acknowledge this too giving the names
- of all the participants.

Determining attitude and knowledge of audience

- At some point you should ask a question or somehow try to determine the attitude and knowledge of the audience.
- How do they feel about the subject?
- You will then have to modify the contents, as you never know exactly what to expect.
- Have you ever heard of...?
- You may already know...
- I feel sure that some of you...
- Every day you encounter...

Give your objectives (purpose, aim, goals)

- The main purpose of an informative speech is to have the audience understand and remember a certain amount of information. You should therefore have two purposes:
 - A general purpose and
 - Specific purpose
- The former is to inform: to give an overview, to present, to summarize, to outline; to discuss the current situation or to explain how to do something or how something is done.
- The latter is what you want the audience to take away with them after listening to you, what you want them to do, what they should remember.
- My purpose in doing this paper is to give you a solid background on the subject of oral presentation skills so that in the future, at Abasyn or elsewhere, you can deliver a successful speech in front of a group.

Announce your outline.

- You want to keep the outline simple so 2 or 3 main points are usually enough. Concerning grammar the headings of the the same grammatical form.
- I have broken my speech down/up into X parts.
- I have divided my presentation (up) into Y parts.
- Questions and comments from the audience.
- You should also let the audience know at some point in the introduction when and whether they may ask questions.
- I'd ask you to save your questions for the end.
- There will be plenty of time at the end of my speech for a discussion.
- You may interrupt me at any moment to ask questions or make comments.

Transition between the introduction and the body.

- You should refer to your transparency or outline.
- Now let us turn to point one.
- Let us now move on to the second part, which is, as I said earlier....

THE MIDDLE OR THE BODY:

- Content: What information should you give in your speech? All your information should support your purpose. In most cases you will have to limit the content, as time is usually precious!
- Quantity: How much information should you give? Enough to clearly develop your ideas. Don't forget to illustrate through examples.
- Sequencing your ideas: Here are a few possibilities for organizing your ideas: logical; chronological order; from general to specific; from known to unknown; from accepted to controversial; cause/effect; problem/solution. Whatever sequencing you choose, the headings should be all of the same grammatical form.

Keeping the audience's attention

- The beginning and the end or the first and last parts of a talk are what listeners will remember best. Think of ways you can keep the audience's attention throughout the rest of the speech.

Signposting or signaling where you are:

- Just as when you are driving along a road that you don't know very well, you depend on signs to guide you, you need to guide the listener by using expressions to tell him/her where you are going. That is to say, first announce what you are going to say (give an example, reformulate etc.) and then say what you want to say. This is very like verbal punctuation. Indicate when you have finished one point and then go on to the next one.
- Listing information:
- Lists are often a necessary evil. Vary your language whenever possible and avoid reading directly.
- There are three things we have to consider: one, two, and three etc.

Outlining options.

- If there are alternative ways of looking at a topic or proposal, outline them to show you are familiar with the different ways of dealing with a situation.
- There seem to be two possible ways of dealing with this...
- We've looked at this from the point of view of the manufacturer but what about if we were to...

To be clear and concrete:

- To give an example: Now let's take an example. An example of this can be found... Etc
- To rephrase: Let me rephrase that, In other words, Another way of saying the same.
- To summarize: Let me summarize by saying, So that concludes my overview

Outlining Option

- To emphasize: What is very significant is... What is important to remember... I'd like to emphasize the fact that... Etc
- To refer to what you have said previously: As I have already said earlier... As we saw in part one... To repeat what I've said already... etc
- To refer to what you will say: We will see this a little later on. This will be the subject of part 3.
- To refer to what an expert says: According to... Here I'd like to quote... As Mr. X says in his book...
- To refer to common knowledge: As you all may well know... ,It is generally accepted that... etc

THE END OR CONCLUSION

- The end of a talk should never come as a surprise to an audience; it needs special consideration.
- The end or the conclusion of your talk should include four parts: a brief reminder of what you tried to show in your speech and how you tried to do so, a short conclusion, thanks to the audience for listening, and an invitation to ask questions, make comments or open a discussion.
- At the end you should briefly summarize your speech in a few lines to make sure the audience has retained the main points. Alternatives are: to state the point of the speech; give the essential message to retain; list the main points and what you want the audience to remember; review informally or indirectly by using a quote, a comparison or example.
- Then you should give some kind of conclusion. That is to say you should give a message that logically comes out of the ideas developed in your speech. This could be a commentary, the lessons learned, some recommendations, or the next steps. You could also make a call to action; the audience should have to do something. Thirdly, thank the audience for being there.

Conclusion

- Finally, ask for questions and comments or invite a discussion. If you choose the former, you put yourself in a superior position compared to the audience and should be considered as an expert. You will need to be very prepared intellectually and psychologically to transfer control to the audience and be able to answer any questions.
- However, in the case of the latter, you put yourself more or less on equal terms with the audience and do not have to be the expert with all the answers! The audience may have some clear ideas or some practical knowledge about the subject themselves!
- Naturally you need to signpost the end of your talk. This may take the form of a recapitulation of the main points. (I'd like to summarize/sum up).
- Or there may be recommendations or proposals that you wish to make; (As a result we suggest that...).
- Above all when you conclude do not do it abruptly or as if surprised to get to
- the end of your talk. (In conclusion I would like to say that...).

Dealing with difficult Questions

- You may at this point wish to distribute a vocabulary list or more detailed information that you wish to make available. (I've prepared a slim folder of the proposals...).
- And finally you may well have to deal with questions. (I'd be happy to answer any questions....).

Dealing with difficult questions:

- Make sure you understand the question.
- Ask a question to see if you understand
- Repeat the question in your own words to check that you have understood.
- if not, ask the questioner to repeat

Answering Question

- In answering: delay the answer (ask for time and/or repeat the question)
- Just a minute please. What is a...?
- How can I put it?
- I'm glad you asked that question.
- That's a good question/point/remark.
- Can I answer that question later?

Admit that you are not responsible: I saw that in the work of... etc

Agree but give an alternative point of view: (I agree with you but there is another way of looking at it).

THE END

PUNCTUATION

In the English language

Outline

- ▣ History of punctuation
- ▣ Types of punctuation marks
- ▣ How to use them
 1. Comma
 2. Semicolon
 3. Colon

A brief history of punctuation

- ❑ The beginnings of punctuation lie in classical rhetoric--the art of oratory. Back in ancient Greece and Rome, when a speech was prepared in writing, marks were used to indicate where--and for how long--a speaker should pause.

- Until the introduction of printing in the late 15th century, punctuation in English was decidedly unsystematic and at times virtually absent. Many of Chaucer's manuscripts, for instance, were punctuated with nothing more than periods at the end of verse lines, without regard for syntax or sense.

- ▣ One of the first to codify the rules of punctuation in English was the playwright Ben Jonson--or rather, Ben:Jonson, who included the colon (he called it the "pause" or "two pricks") in his signature. In the final chapter of The English Grammar (1640), Jonson briefly discusses the primary functions of the comma, parenthesis, period, colon, question mark (the "interrogation"), and exclamation point (the "admiration").

Modern punctuation

Main types of punctuation marks

- ▣ End Punctuation: Periods, Question Marks, and Exclamation Points
- ▣ Commas
- ▣ Semicolons
- ▣ Colons
- ▣ Dashes
- ▣ Hyphens

Commas

- ▣ The most popular mark of punctuation, the comma(,) is also the least law-abiding. In Greek, thekomma was a "piece cut off" from a line of verse--what in English today we'd call a phrase or a clause. Since the 16th century, comma has referred to the mark that sets off words, phrases, and clauses.

Using the comma

1. Use a comma before a coordinator (and, but, yet, or, nor, for, so) that links two main clauses:

"The optimist thinks that this is the best of all possible worlds, and the pessimist knows it."

2. Use a Comma to Separate Items in a Series

"It is by the goodness of God that in our country we have three unspeakably precious things: freedom of speech, freedom of conscience, and the prudence never to practice either of them."

3. Use a comma after a phrase or clause that precedes the subject of the sentence

"When you get to the end of your rope, tie a knot and hang on."

How NOT to use the comma

Do not use a comma to separate the subject from its predicate:

[WRONG] Registering for our fitness programs before September 15, will save you thirty percent of the membership cost.

Do not misuse a comma after a co-ordinating conjunction:

[WRONG] Sleet fell heavily on the tin roof but, the family was used to the noise and paid it no attention.

Semicolon

- ▣ A mark of punctuation (;) used to connect independent clauses and show a closer relationship than a period does.

Using the semicolon.Examples

"Happiness isn't something you experience; it's something you remember."

"Volleyball games resume on the sand flat; someone fires up the sauna; in the long dusk, at eleven o'clock, half a dozen beach fires people the shore."

Colon

- ▣ A mark of punctuation (:) used after a statement (usually an independent clause) that introduces a quotation, an explanation, an example, or a series.

Using the colon.Examples

"I have never made but one prayer to God, a very short one: 'O Lord, make my enemies ridiculous.' And God granted it."

"There are three choices in this life: be good, get good, or give up."

"It is by the goodness of God that in our country we have these three unspeakably precious things: freedom

Dash

A mark of punctuation (—), technically known as an em dash, used to set off a word or phrase after an independent clause or to set off words, phrases, or clauses that interrupt a sentence.

(!)Don't confuse the dash (—) with the hyphen (-).

Using the dash.Examples

"My cow turned out to be a very large one. The first time I led her out I felt the way I did the first time I ever took a girl to the theater — embarrassed but elated."

"A hypocrite is a person who — but who isn't?"

Hyphen

A short horizontal mark of punctuation (-) used between the parts of a compound word or name or between the syllables of a word when divided at the end of a line.

(!)Don't confuse the hyphen (-) with the dash (—).

Using the hyphen.Examples

"The hyphen is the most un-American thing in the world."

"New truth is always a go-between, a smoother-over of transitions."

"I'm part of the blame-America-last crowd."

Conclusion 😊

Remember: Punctuation is being governed two-thirds by rule and one-third by personal taste :)

And don't forget that proper

The End.

TOPIC PUNCTUATION MARKS

Punctuation marks

A mark, such as a full stop, comma, or question mark, used in writing to separate sentences and their elements and to clarify meaning.

There are 14 punctuation marks that are commonly used in English grammar. They are the Period, Question mark, Exclamation point, Comma, Semicolon, Colon, Dash, Hyphen, Parentheses, Brackets, Braces, Apostrophe, Quotation marks, and Ellipsis.

Sentence Endings

Three of the fourteen punctuation marks are appropriate for use as sentence endings. They are the Period, Question mark, Exclamation point.

The Period (.) is placed at the end of declarative sentences, statements thought to be complete and after many abbreviations.

As a sentence ender: Jane and Jack went to the market.
After an abbreviation: Her son, John Jones Jr., was born on Dec. 6, 2008.

Question Mark (?) is used to indicate a direct question when placed at the end of a sentence.

For Example:When did Jane leave for the market?

The exclamation point (!) is used when a person wants to express a sudden outcry or add emphasis.

For Example: "Holy cow!" screamed Jane.

Comma, Semicolon, and Colon

The comma, semicolon, and colon are often misused because they all can indicate a pause in a series.

The comma is used to show a separation of ideas or elements within the structure of a sentence. Additionally, it is used in numbers, dates, and letter writing after the salutation and closing.

Direct address: Thanks for all your help, John.

Separation of two complete sentences: We went to the movies, and then we went out to lunch.

Separating lists or elements within sentences: Suzi wanted the black, green, and blue dress.

Whether to add a final comma before the conjunction in a list is a matter of debate. This final comma, known as an Oxford or serial comma, is useful in a complex series of elements or phrases but is often considered unnecessary in a simple series such as in the example above. It usually comes down to a style choice by the writer.

The semicolon (;) is used to connect independent clauses. It shows a closer relationship between the clauses than a period would show.

For Example:John was hurt; he knew she only said it to upset him.

A colon (:) has three main uses. The first is after a word introducing a quotation, an explanation, an example, or a series.

For Example:He was planning to study four subjects: politics, philosophy, sociology, and economics.

The second is between independent clauses when the second explains the first, similar to a semicolon:

For Example: I didn't have time to get changed: I was already late.

The third use of a colon is for emphasis:

For Example:There was one thing she loved more than any other: her dog.

A colon also has non-grammatical uses in time, ratio, business correspondence and references.

Dash and the Hyphen

Two other common punctuation marks are the dash and hyphen. These marks are often confused with each other due to their appearance but they are very different.

A dash is used to separate words into statements. There are two common types of dashes: en dash and em dash.

En dash: Twice as long as a hyphen, the en dash is a symbol (--) that is used in writing or printing to indicate a range, connections or differentiations, such as 1880-1945 or Princeton-New York trains.

Em dash: Longer than the en dash, the em dash can be used in place of a comma, parenthesis, or colon to enhance readability or emphasize the conclusion of a sentence. For example, She gave him her answer --- No!

Whether you put spaces around the em dash or not is a style choice. Just be consistent.

A hyphen is used to join two or more words together into a compound term and is not separated by spaces.

For example, part-time, back-to-back, well-known.

Brackets, Braces, and Parentheses

Brackets, braces, and parentheses are symbols used to contain words that are a further explanation or are considered a group.

Brackets are the squared off notations ([]) used for technical explanations or to clarify meaning. If you remove the information in the brackets, the sentence will still make sense.

For Example:He [Mr. Jones] was the last person seen at the house.

Braces ({}) are used to contain two or more lines of text or listed items to show that they are considered as a unit. They are not commonplace in most writing but can be seen in computer programming to show what should be contained within the same lines. They can also be used in mathematical expressions.

For example, $2\{1+[23-3]\}=x$.

Parentheses () are curved notations used to contain further thoughts or qualifying remarks. However, parentheses can be replaced by commas without changing the meaning in most cases.

For Example: John and Jane (who were actually half brother and sister) both have red hair.

Apostrophe, Quotation Marks and Ellipsis

The final three punctuation forms in English grammar are the apostrophe, quotation marks, and ellipsis.

An apostrophe (') is used to indicate the omission of a letter or letters from a word, the possessive case, or the plurals of lowercase letters. Examples of the apostrophe in use include:

- Omission of letters from a word: I've seen that movie several times. She wasn't the only one who knew the answer.
- Possessive case: Sara's dog bit the neighbor.
- Plural for lowercase letters: Six people were told to mind their p's and q's.

Quotations marks (" ") are a pair of punctuation marks used primarily to mark the beginning and end of a passage attributed to another and repeated word for word. They are also used to indicate meanings and to indicate the unusual or dubious status of a word.

For Example: "Don't go outside," she said.

Single quotation marks (' ') are used most frequently for quotes within quotes.

Marie told the teacher, "I saw Marc at the playground, and he said to me 'Bill started the fight,' and I believed him."

The ellipsis is most commonly represented by three periods (. . .) although it is occasionally demonstrated with three asterisks (*). The ellipsis is used in writing or printing to indicate an omission, especially of letters or words.

Ellipses are frequently used within quotations to jump from one phrase to another, omitting unnecessary words that do not interfere with the meaning. Students writing research papers or newspapers quoting parts of speeches will often employ ellipsis to avoid copying lengthy text that is not needed.

For Example :She began to count, "One, two, three, four..." until she got to 10, then went to find him.

Curriculum Vitae vs. Resume

- A Resume is a one or two page summary of your skills, experience and education. A Resume is brief and concise - no more than a page or two, a curriculum vitae is a longer (at least two pages) and more detailed synopsis.
- In Europe, the Middle East, Africa, or Asia, employers may expect to receive a curriculum vitae.
- In the United States, It is also applicable when applying for fellowships or grants.

There are several basic types of Resume or CVs or CV used to apply for job openings. Depending on your personal circumstances, choose a chronological, a functional, combination, or a targeted Resume or CV.

Types of Resume or CVs or CV

- Chronological Resume or CV
- Functional Resume or CV
- Combination Resume or CV
- Resume or CV With Profile
- Targeted Resume or CV
- Mini Resume
- Nontraditional Resume or CVs or CV
 - Info graphic Resume or CVs or CV
 - Social web Resume or CVs or CV
 - Video Resume or CVs or CV

Chronological Resume or CV

A chronological Resume or CV starts by listing your work history, with the most recent position listed first. Your jobs are listed in reverse chronological order with your current, or most recent job, first. Employers typically prefer this type of Resume or CV because it's easy to see what jobs you have held and when you have worked at them. This type of Resume or CV works well for job seekers with a strong, solid work history.

Functional Resume or CV

A functional Resume or CV focuses on your skills and experience, rather than on your chronological work history. It is used most often by people who are changing careers or who have gaps in their employment history.

Combination Resume or CV:

A combination Resume or CV lists your skills and experience first. Your employment history is listed next. With this type of Resume or CV you can highlight the skills you have that are relevant to the job you are applying for, and also provide the chronological work history that employers prefer.

Resume or CV With Profile

A Resume or CV with a profile section includes a summary of an applicant's skills, experiences and goals as they relate to a specific job.

Targeted Resume or CV:

- A targeted Resume or CV is a Resume or CV that is customized so that it specifically highlights the experience and skills you have that are relevant to the job you are applying for. It definitely takes more work to write a targeted Resume or CV than to just click to apply with your existing Resume or CV. However, it's well worth the effort, especially when applying for jobs that are a perfect match for your qualifications and experience.

Mini Resume

A mini Resume contains a brief summary of your career highlights qualifications. It can be used for networking purposes or shared upon request from a prospective employer or reference writer who may want an overview of your accomplishments, rather than a full length Resume.

Nontraditional Resume or CV

A nontraditional Resume or CV is a web-based version of your Resume or CV that may include photos, graphics, images, graphs and other visuals.

Types of Nontraditional Resume or CV

- Info graphic Resume or CV
- Online Resume or CV and Social Resume or CV
- LinkedIn Profile Resume or CV
- Video Resume or CV

Effective Resumes and Cover Letters

Purpose of the Resume & Cover Letter:

To obtain an interview (not a job) by communicating your unique knowledge, skills and values required for a targeted job

Important preliminary steps

1. Self-Assess: What are your skills, interests, values?
2. Identify specific career fields of interest: Which are a good fit for you?
3. Research the career fields
 - Identify the specific language of the fields
 - Identify the skills of the fields: Job specific skills and transferable /adaptive skills

Picking a resume style which best presents your qualifications

Chronological

Represents your experience in a date order with the most recent/relevant experience first.

Functional

Emphasizes qualifications according to categories using job-related skills. Work experience is placed under different skill categories, not under specific positions.

Using Accomplishment Statements

Use statements that emphasize achievements rather than duties.

NOT THIS:

Computer programmer, XYZ office, Tokyo,

March 1999-present

- System maintainer
- Trouble shooter
- Web designer

Using Accomplishment Statements

THIS:

Competent computer programmer , August 2000-present

XYZ company, Tokyo,

Assist up to 300 customers during a four hour time period in a fast paced, stressful environment

Troubleshoot system inventory issues, ordering supplies proactively to maintain appropriate inventory levels crucial for effective customer service

Problem solve and negotiate a diversity of customer service issues

Proving your effectiveness

1. Describe what you actually DID, not just what was on the original job description
2. Include what IMPACT/ CONTRIBUTION your actions provided (the results)
3. Provide details
 - Supervised WHO and HOW MANY?
 - Analyzed WHAT? HOW?
 - Improved quality, efficiency, productivity HOW?

Using strong action verbs

- Avoid starting phrases with “Handle...”, “Work with...”, “Duties included...”, “Responsible for...”
- Start each bulleted statement with a descriptive action-oriented verb and combine with accomplishment statement
 - (Not this) Handled incoming telephone calls
 - (This) Directed up to 40 customer calls per hour to appropriate service departments throughout company

Organizing information efficiently for reader with descriptive headings

- Suggestions for headings:
 - Education
 - Internships
 - Academic Projects/Coursework
 - Computer Skills
 - Relevant Experience
 - Honors
 - Language Skills
 - Leadership Experiences
 - Community Service or Activities

Organizing information efficiently for reader with descriptive headings

- Suggestions for headings (continued):
 - Professional Affiliations
 - Skill Summary
 - Licenses and Certifications
 - Military experience
 - Technical Skills
 - Laboratory Skills
 - Publications and Presentations
 - Avoid: “References available upon request” statement

Increasing the effectiveness of your resume and cover letter

- Maintain 100% error free
- Tailor both resume and cover letter to each position and employer
- Lead with most relevant information first
- Avoid items that might promote negative bias
- Use abbreviations only if standard and well-known
- Keep to one page-unless you have a lot of relevant experience

UNIT-6: DESCRIPTIVE PARAGRAPH

What is a descriptive paragraph?

- 🧠 Describes how something or someone looks or feels
- 🧠 Include how the writer feels
- 🧠 ‘Shows’ the reader than ‘tell’
- 🧠 Creates a sensory image on the reader’s mind

WE DIVIDE DESCRIPTIVE PARAGRAPH INTO 3 PARTS:

Description
of a person

Description
of a place

Description
of a thing or experience

Descriptive paragraphs let the reader touch, taste, see, hear and smell what you are describing. The reader should feel as if they can see what you are describing clearly. You want to paint a picture as you write the descriptive paragraph. Here are a few guidelines to help you write a great descriptive paragraph.

1- Describe particular smells and tastes in the paragraph. Use the most descriptive words possible to allow the reader to smell or taste what you are describing.

2- Add the senses of touch and hearing to your paragraph wherever possible. Describe certain textures and sounds.

 3- Use 'like and as' when you write your descriptive paragraph. These devices strengthen your paragraph if used properly.

E.g: My best friend is like the sun in my life

4- Insert descriptive adjectives to modify your nouns. Don't just say "ocean." Describe the actual colors you see in the ocean. Use more descriptive words such as deep dark blue ocean.

THINGS TO REMEMBER WHILE WRITING A DESCRIPTIVE PARAGRAPH

1- SPATIAL ORDER

Spatial order shows how people and objects are arranged in a space or scene. A description can be organized spatially in several ways:

- from top to bottom,
 - outside to inside,
 - left to right,
 - near to far,
 - or the reverse of any of these

EXAMPLE OF SPATIAL ORDER : (CLASSROOM)

In Ms. Cakar's classroom we see a lot of things. To the left of the class, we see 10 posters in the colors of the rainbow. In front of us is a white, square projector shade. In back of it is a green, rectangular chalkboard. To the right of the room is a black radio on top of the silver file cabinets...

2- You can make use of the following language use in descriptive paragraph ...

WHILE DESCRIBING THINGS:

It is made of..... (The table in my room is made of wood.)

It consists of..... (This city consists of many mysterious people.)

WHILE DESCRIBING PEOPLE or PLACES

As & like

She sings like an angel

My friend looks like Antony Hopkins.

I cannot cook as my mother

I want to join army as a pilot

Here are three sample paragraphs: about a person, a place and a thing. Focus on the topic sentences, spatial order and descriptive words...

My Son Burak

My eight year old son, Burak, is different from other children because of his distinctive appearance and personality. The first thing I notice when I look at him is his size. He stands at shoulder height next to me; indeed, he is taller than other children of his age, and is definitely stronger. Also his red hair is remarkable; it is thick, and stylish. Also, Burak has freckles on his face. His eyes are bright blue, and his eyebrows are blond. His lips are thick and somewhat feminine, and he has gaps in his teeth. His shoulders are broad and his belly is plump. When we hold hands, you can see that his hands are as large as my hands. His legs are strong, and his knees are covered with purple bruises, because he always falls down while he is skateboarding and biking. Despite his appearance, Burak is sensitive and caring; in fact, he still likes to sit on my lap. He likes to open doors for me, look after his little brother, and help me grocery shop. To sum up, although he is only eight years old, he is big and strong, but at the same time he is loving and gentle.

The Beach in Hawaii

☀ A beach in Hawaii is like a paradise. To start with, the beach smells fresh like a new ocean air freshener. The sand is so hot that when you walk on it after the sea, you feel like you walk on a burning grill. Not far from the shore, you can see the palm trees. They sway in the air from the strong wind. In a distance, there is a beautiful house by the water, so you can see the navy blue ocean every day. People are laughing and playing on the burning sand, and others are relaxing on the beach sunbathing. They seem to enjoy the bright rays of the sun. From a far distance the ocean is a deep navy blue; waves come in like a bulldozer from all the wind. But at nights everything is still and quiet. You can only hear the waves of the ocean and the light wind which comes from the huge palm trees. To sum up, this beach is an amazing place for a perfect summer holiday.

The Shared Refrigerator

My roommate and I share a refrigerator. My roommate's half of our refrigerator is very neat. On the top shelf is a carton of milk, a pitcher of orange juice, and a bottle of mineral water. These are arranged in a straight line on the shelf. On the next shelf are cans of soda. These are carefully lined up in rows. Orange soda is in the first row, Pepsi in the second, and 7-Up in the third. On the third shelf, he keeps dairy foods such as butter, cheese, eggs, and yogurt. On the bottom shelf sit plastic containers of leftovers.¹ These are neatly arranged by size. The large ones are in the back, and the small ones are in the front. There are two drawers in the bottom of the refrigerator. In his drawer, my roommate keeps vegetables and fruit. Each item is in a separate plastic bag in the drawer. My roommate is an organized person, and his half of our refrigerator really reflects his personality.

A Presentation on:

LISTENING SKILLS

Listening

- ❖ Listening is the most important communication skill
- ❖ We probably spend more time using our Listening Skills than any other kind of skill
- ❖ Like other skills, Listening takes

Effective Listening

Effective Listening is the process of analyzing sounds, organizing them into recognizable patterns, interpreting the patterns and understanding the message by inferring the meaning

Many of the problems we experience with people in our daily lives are primarily attributable to ineffective listening or lack of listening

Listening Comes First

The First and the foremost communication skill that we learn in our lives is nothing but "LISTENING"

LISTENING

SPEAKING

Listening is not Hearing

ACCORDING TO THE ELMHURST COLLEGE LEARNING CENTER:

Listening and hearing are not the same. Hearing is the first stage of listening. Hearing occurs when our ears pick up sound waves which are then transported to our brain. This stage is our sense of hearing.

Listening is a communication process and, to be successful, is an active process. In other words, we must be an active participant in this communication process. In active listening, meaning and evaluation of a message must take place before a listener can respond to a speaker.

Basic Communication Skills Profile

Communication	Order Learnt	Extent Used	Extent Taught
Listening	First	First	Fourth
Speaking	Second	Second	Third

Fallacies about Listening

- Listening is not my problem!
- Listening and hearing are the same
- Good readers are good listeners
- Smarter people are better listeners

Objectives of Listening

- ❖ To learn
 - ❖ To increase one's understanding
 - ❖ To advise or counsel

Research Findings

One quarter of our waking time is spent in listening

Research shows that at the workplace, on an average, personnel spend about:

- 32.7 percent of their time listening
- 25.8 percent of their time speaking
- 22.6 percent of their time writing

Importance of Listening

- Communication is not complete without effective listening
- An attentive listener stimulates better speaking by the speaker
- A good listener learns more than an indifferent listener

Real Listening

Real listening has three basic steps:

- Hearing Hearing just means listening enough to catch what the speaker is saying. For example, say you were listening to a report on zebras, and the speaker mentioned that no two are alike. If you can repeat the fact, then you have heard what has been said.
- Understanding The next part of listening happens when you take what you have heard and understand it in your own way. Let's go back to that report on zebras. When you hear that no two are alike, think about what that might mean. You might think, "Maybe this means that the pattern of stripes is different from each other."

Active Listening Process

STEPS:

- Hearing
- Filtering
- Comprehending

HEARING

Hearing is the first essential step in the listening process and relates to the sensory perception of sound. The listener further processes the perceived sound. For learning to be effective, hearing needs to be done with attentiveness and concentration.

FILTERING

The next step involves sensing and filtering of heard sounds.

COMPREHENDING

The listener understands what the speaker has tried to convey. This activity can be described as absorbing, grasping or assimilating. The listener uses his knowledge, experience, perception and cognitive power.

REMEMBERING

The assimilated message is stored in memory to facilitate future recall.

Types of Listening

DISCRIMINATIVE LISTENING – It involves identifying the difference between various sounds. It also enables one to differentiate between familiar and unfamiliar language.

COMPREHENSION LISTENING – It involves attaching meaning to what is being listened to. It may also include comprehending the non verbal messages being conveyed by the speaker.

Types of Listening

ATTENTIVE LISTENING – It involves paying attention to the words that are being spoken.

PRETENCE LISTENING – It involves more hearing than listening. It means pretending through facial expressions that one is listening when actually one is not.

SELECTIVE LISTENING – It involves selecting the desired part of the message and ignoring the undesired

Barriers to Effective Listening

- Physical Barriers
- People – Related Barriers
 - Physiological Barriers
 - Psychological Barriers

Physical Barriers

- Noise
- Poor acoustics
- Defective mechanical devices
- Frequent interruptions

Physiological Barriers

- State of Health – State of health of the listener and the speaker affects the listening ability. Fever, pain or any other form of bodily discomfort makes it difficult for a person to listen or speak comfortably.
- Disability – Hearing deficiencies may lead to poor listening. Similarly, speech disorders of the speaker may make a speech incoherent to the listener. Speaker's accent may also make it difficult for the listener to comprehend.

Psychological Barriers

- Being unsure of the speaker's ability – Based on past experience or inputs from sources, the listener may have a preconceived notion of the speaker's ability. He may perceive the speaker to not be well informed, or to be lacking in depth and ability. Hence the listener will not listen to what the speaker has to say.
- Personal anxiety – Sometimes the listener is preoccupied with personal concerns and anxieties. This

Psychological Barriers

- Impatience – The listener may not have patience to wait for the other person to finish what he has to say. He may be intolerant or may be eager to add his own points to the discussion. As a result, his desire to speak overcomes his desire to listen, thus acting as a barrier.
- Emotional blocks – Our deep seated beliefs in certain ideas may make it difficult for us to listen to ideas which go against our belief. We may hear such an idea wrongly or it

Tips for being a Good Listener

- Give your full attention on the person who is speaking. Don't look out the window or at what else is going on in the room.
- Make sure your mind is focused. It can be easy to let your mind wander if you think you know what the person is going to say next, but you might be wrong! If you feel your mind wandering, change the position of your body and try to concentrate on the speaker's words.

Tips for being a Good Listener

- Let yourself finish listening before you begin to speak! You can't really listen if you are busy thinking about what you want to say next.
- Listen for main ideas. The main ideas are the most important points the speaker wants to get across. They may be mentioned at the start or end of a talk, and repeated a number of times. Pay special attention to statements that begin with phrases such as "My point is..."

Tips for being a Good Listener

- Give feedback. Sit up straight and look directly at the speaker. Now and then, nod to show that you understand. At appropriate points you may also smile, frown, laugh, or be silent. These are all ways to let the speaker know that you are really listening. Remember, you listen with your face as well as your ears!

- ▶ Writing is a creative skill as other skills proficiency comes with practice same case in writing.

IS THE PAINTING
VOICE!"

VOLTAIRE

Writing as skill

- ▶ Writing is a one of important skills in communication.
- ▶ Writing skills are highly essentials because organization needs professional writers.
- ▶ Some people develop writing skills as career like poets , writers , novelist and historian etc.
- ▶ Good writing skills allow you to communicate your message with clarity and ease to a far larger audience to understand.

Types of Writing:

- ▶ E-mails
- Letters and Memos
- Free writing
- ▶ Easy writing
- ▶ Independent writing
- ▶ Narrative writing
- ▶ Expository writing
- ▶ Persuasive writing

E-mails:

- ▶ E-mail is fast, convenient and easy
- ▶ Email is now the dominant method of communicating in business.
- ▶ Convenient for communicating with people in different places and different time zones.
- ▶ Easier to communicate with people who understand written English but don't speak it well.
- ▶ Excellent mechanism for follow-up or action items after a meeting

Letters and Memos:

- ▶ Letters and memos are the basic vehicles of business communication.
- ▶ They should be brief and make a single point (no more than 2 pages)
- ▶ Letters are for external communications.
- ▶ Memos are for internal communications.

Free Writing:

- Free writing is a prewriting technique in which a person writes continuously for a set period of time without regard to spelling, grammar, or topic. It produces raw, often unusable material, but helps writers overcome blocks of apathy and self-criticism.

Easy writing:

- Sentences containing verbal's.
- Sentences using present and past participles (in phrases)
- Appositive construction
- Sentences using semicolons for more intricate formats
- Sentences containing relative clauses
- Sentences using subordinate clauses
- Reproducible worksheets

Principles of good writing.

- ▶ purpose
- ▶ Use clear language.
- ▶ Be objective.
- ▶ Structure.
- ▶ Choice of words.
- ▶ Punctuation.
- ▶ Grammatically correct.
- ▶ Proofread.
- ▶ style

Purpose:

- ▶ First of all you must know why you are writing.
- ▶ The writing process is like a building. On the skeleton of purpose the building is constructed.
- ▶ There are many purpose of writing like good news , bad news , message of inquiry etc.

Use clear language:

- ▶ Use the sort of words you would use in conversation.
- ▶ Use a level of language that is accessible to your readers.
- ▶ Avoid overuse of clichés, similes and worn out phrases.
- ▶ Write short sentences so that your reader get the basic or theme point of ur phrase.

Be objective:

- Present the information objectively.
- Your conclusions should arise logically from the information presented, and be based on the facts and evidence you have collected, rather than your own opinion or what you would like to happen.

Structure:

- ▶ A clear beginning, middle and an end.
- ▶ It is more challenging to understand the chain of thought in written communication than when it is expressed verbally.
- ▶ The blue print of your thoughts in your mind will decide the structure of your writing.

Choice of words:

- ▶ The words that you use determine your style.
- ▶ Your writing could be easy and based on simple words so that your reader gets the main point.
- ▶ Words can convey positive, negative, strong or weak messages depending on what you choose to express yourself.

Punctuation:

- ▶ Its have a large effect.
- ▶ In speaking we don't need to have any commas , full stop ,question mark etc.
- ▶ But if u don't use the commas , full stop etc. In your writing phrase the reader can get difficulty to read and understand.
- ▶ A writer should have a best knowledge to use these things.

Grammatically correct:

- ▶ No grammatical mistakes.
- ▶ In writing grammar have a larger effect...if u write correct grammar the reader understand context easily.

Proofread:

- ▶ Proofread as many times as it is required to get it perfect.
- ▶ This thing helps send out errors all the time.
- ▶ After you finish writing, read and re-read and check for typos and grammar errors.
- ▶ Check for concision and cut out every single word.

Style:

- ▶ Style is the main every writer owns his own style.
- ▶ An easy style has a quick impact.
- ▶ The message should be understood on first reading.

What is the writing process?

- ▶ Every writer follows his or her own writing process.
- ▶ Here are five steps towards creating or identifying your personal writing process:
 - i. Prewriting
 - ii. Writing
 - iii. Revision
 - iv. Editing
 - v. Publishing

Prewriting:

- ▶ Prewriting identifies everything you need to do before you sit down to start your rough draft.
- ▶ Find Your Idea:
Ideas are all around you. You might draw inspiration from a routine, an everyday situation or a childhood memory.
- ▶ Build On Your Idea:
Two of the most popular methods of fleshing out your idea are free writing and brainstorming. Free writing means writing every idea that comes into your head.
- ▶ Plan and Structure:
Piecing the puzzle together comes next. It's time to sort through your ideas and choose which ones you will use to form your story.

Writing:

- ▶ Now you have your plan and you're ready to start writing.
- ▶ Forget about word count and grammar. Don't worry if you stray off topic in places; even the greatest writers produce multiple drafts before they produce their finished manuscript.
- ▶ Identify the best time and location to write and eliminate potential distractions.
- ▶ Make writing a regular part of your day.

Revision:

- ▶ Your story can change a great deal during this stage. When revising their work, many writers naturally adopt the A.R.R.R. approach

Add:

- ▶ Have you given your readers all the information they need to make sense of your story?
- ▶ If not, go back to your notebook that you kept for additional scenes and any additional details.

Rearrange:

- ▶ Consider the flow, pacing and sequencing of your story. Would the plot be better served if some of the events occur in a different order?

Remove:

- ▶ After making additions to your story, how is your word count now? Are your readers experiencing information overload? You may need to eliminate passages that don't quite fit.

Replace:

- ▶ The most effective way to revise your work is to ask for a second opinion. Do you need more vivid details to help clarify your work?

Editing:

- ▶ You have overhauled your story. It's time to fine tune your manuscript line by line.
- ▶ Check for repetition, clarity, grammar, spelling and punctuation. Editing is an extremely detailed process and its best when performed by a professional.
- ▶ Nobody wants to read a book that is full of mistakes, and they certainly won't buy a book that is riddled with them.

Publishing:

- ▶ Publication may extend to a multimedia presentation or lead to a public performance.
- ▶ The Presentation Trait is emphasized during this phase of the writing process as the writer works to make the piece appealing and inviting to the audience.

Barriers of writing skills

- ▶ Noise
- ▶ Lack of effective tools
- ▶ Training for writing
- ▶ Scope of motivation
- ▶ Writers block

Noise:

- ▶ Its very common problem that we feel in our work station.
- ▶ A writer require a complete silent place.
- ▶ When any one involved in writing his thoughts travel in a coded message to his mind. If any one interrupts the flow of thoughts is disturbed then he became disturbed.
- ▶ But a writer should be used to the noise factor because he cannot come across a place that is filled with utmost silence expect occasionally.
- ▶ He should concentrate in his work deeply.

Lack of effective tools:

- ▶ Writer requires many tools for writing.
- ▶ Today's writer requires internet to gather information.
- ▶ Everybody is not lucky enough to own a PC and buy an internet connection at home.
- ▶ If he lacks digital facilities, then he can gather information from the books. He should store books that he buys or uses for academic purposes.
- ▶ A writer should also learn to make effective use of his tools. Even if he has an internet connection at home, he must know the techniques to search the desired results.

Training for writing:

- ▶ Everybody is not lucky enough to imbibe training for effective writing.
- ▶ If a writer belongs to a wealthy background, his parents can assist and finance for him to learn various courses for writing.
- ▶ But even if he is not able to acquire any training he should train himself.
- ▶ He can gather information from various sources such as internet, books, libraries, friends etc.

Scope of motivation:

- ▶ Sometimes a person may feel the urge to write something, but the people around him may not encourage him. They may tell him that he is not a good writer.
- ▶ In such situation, he should not follow the words of others but he should follow his own path. If he is urged he should take a step ahead.
- ▶ If he has not developed the necessary skills he can learn a lot by watching the other writers in the forum. He can learn the skills that are necessary for a writer.

Writers block:

- ▶ A writer consistently needs to think and ponder to write something.
- ▶ At a point of time when he or she is continuously delivering thoughts to pin down, he may come to a point where his mind becomes saturated. At this time, he cannot think further as his mind becomes blocked.
- ▶ To refresh his mind and start writing again he can use different techniques. He should quietly sit down in a room and read something that absorbs his mind.

How we can improve writing skills?

- ▶ USE STRAIGHTFORWARD LANGUAGE. The most fundamental way to simplify writing is to use simpler words. ...
- ▶ TRIM LONG SENTENCES. ...
- ▶ AVOID REDUNDANCIES. ...
- ▶ CUT EXCESSIVE QUALIFICATION. ...
- ▶ AVOID NEEDLESS SELF-REFERENCE. ...
- ▶ FAVOR ACTIVE VOICE. ...
- ▶ FAVOR VERBS, NOT NOUNS. ...
- ▶ USE PARALLEL FORMS.

Conclusion:

- ▶ Utilize full potential of written communication
- ▶ Use frequent e-mails as per your requirement
- ▶ What you write will ultimately define you as a professional to your colleagues and superiors
- ▶ Match the appropriate communication method to the recipient
- ▶ Eliminating excessive or unnecessary communication will improve your workflow
- ▶ Mastering these skills will improve your ability and enhance your career

thank you!
